There is A Life

Activity Found Beyond School

The alarm sounded. Hastily, the rush began as flustered students gathered their books and hurried to school. Racing the tardy bell was an almost inevitable occurrence.

"I rush like crazy to get my books and then run to class because I need a few extra minutes of sleep before I come to school," senior Ryan Wiede said.

Students valued their sleep time, and for that reason, they preferred to press the snooze button rather than arrive at school with time to spare.

"Considering I'm always running late, I'm usually speed walking my way to class," senior Jennifer Maufrais said.

However, some students arrived at school at least an hour before first period. Rushing to finish assignments before class was not uncommon for students.

And with before school study halls, club meetings, and sports, band, choir, and theatre rehearsals, students started off their gruelling school day at a disadvantage.

"I'm in so many clubs that I often have two or three meetings to attend in one morning," senior Corey Rogers said.

Others used the time before school to socialize.

"I usually talk with my gal pals about the latest gossip," sophomore Delene Thomas said.

Afterschool activities included doing homework, watching television, working, or hanging out with friends. Of course, some students remained after school an extra hour or two for sports, band, or other school-related functions.

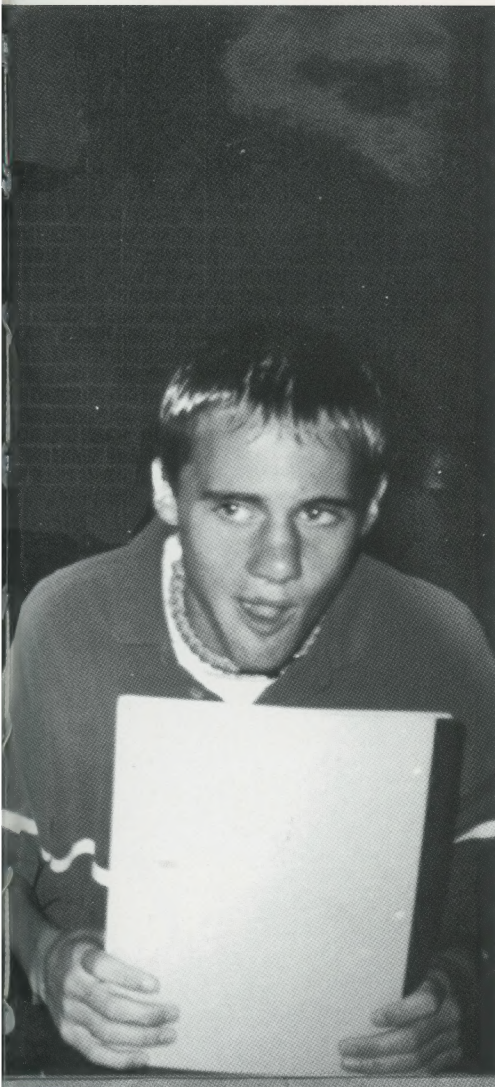

Naturally, there was a tendency for students to become frazzled.

"The amount of stress school puts on us has a lot to do with why teenagers have such frayed emotions," senior Bradley Lane said.

Students had many different ways of relaxing, when they had the time. Some watched TV or surfed the internet. Others spent time with their friends shooting pool, or just hanging out.

However, getting everything done and still finding time to relax with friends was no easy task.

"We need 36 hour days," sophomore Mason Cannales said. Story by Leah Ross and David Spence

Craving the Crown

Nominees Leave Umbrellas Behind

As sweet perfume filled the air and the glitter of sequins lit the evening, smiles abounded as the nominees and their escorts elegantly stepped onto Eagle field. Anticipation prevailed as the Homecoming Queen was to be announced.

The entire day had been full of spirit, with hopes soaring for the night's football game and ceremonies. The day started with the traditional decorating of the halls contest. The seniors won for the fourth consecutive year, this time with a 1970's theme.

"I knew we were going to win it," senior John Richards said. "The seniors win every year."

The school's enthusiastic spirit carried through the day and in to the pep rally. Each class performed skits that dealt with their theme, 60's, 70's, reggae, etc.

By the time the game started, there was not a cloud in the sky. It was understood that this game, unlike previous years, would not be played in the rain.

At halftime, the band, colorguard, and Georgettes began with a musical dance routine to "Pretty Woman."

Following the introductions of the nominees and the naming of the four duchesses, the new Queen, Erin Vargo, was crowned.

"At first it didn't seem like a very big deal, but as people congratulated me, I began to realize what an honor it was," senior Erin Vargo said.

After breaking the pattern of wet and rainy Homecomings, the Eagles also broke another pattern and won the game.

"I knew they'd pull it off!" freshman Nathen Ruiz said.

The next night, the Homecoming dance took place in the commons.

"It was fun to actually dress up to one of the dances without using your paycheck to buy a ticket," senior Laura Coffin said.

All in all, the Homecoming proved to be a day worth remembering. by Greg Myrick

On the Road Again

Buses, Trucks, and Automobiles

The difference between junior high and high school? About 100 parking spaces. One of the major events that high schoolers look forward to is driving.

Most drivers were in grades 11-12, and drove a variety of vehicles. Vehicles allowed people to exhibit their personality.

"I love the stereo system in my Ford Probe; it keeps me rolling," senior Jared Stewart.

Some students were not as proud of their vehicles.

"My car is about as stubborn as a mule," senior Ali Stone said.

Those who did not yet have a license were forced to either ride the bus, ride with parents, or tag along with friends.

"I would rather ride with friends than ride on a bus," freshman Grant Myrick said.

"I don't really like riding the bus because it is loud and it takes too long to get home," freshman Chris Rose said.

Vehicles were a major step toward independence, when students were no longer forced to have mom and dad drop them off at parties.

Although driver's licenses allowed more freedom and fun, they could also produce problems, such as tickets, car and insurance payments, and maintenance.

"It's a good idea to look at the speedometer," senior Kelly Parks said.

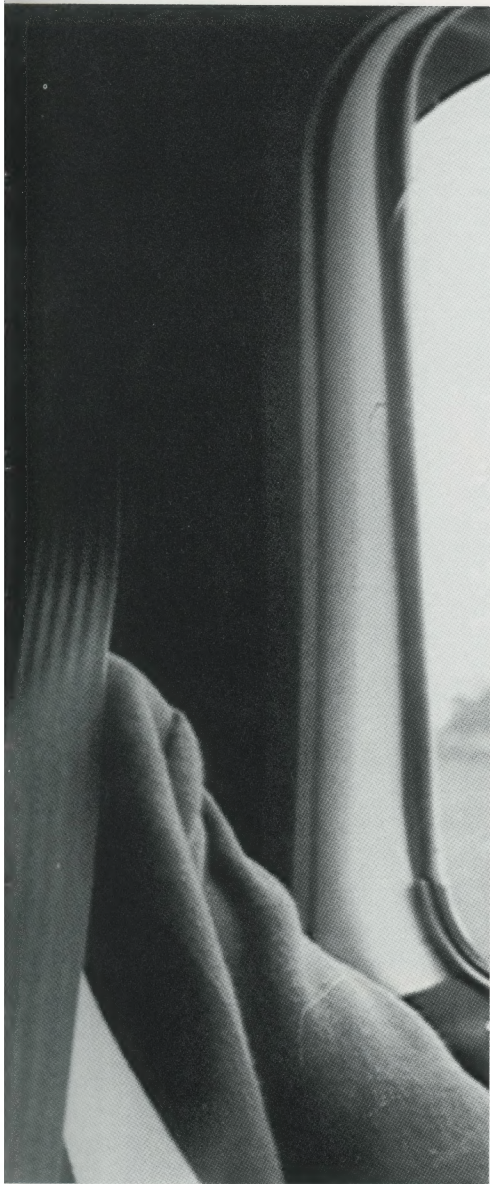

Other than financial problems, some students got annoyed when everyone suddenly became their best friend.

"I can't leave school alone without about five people asking me for rides," junior Ryan Martin said.

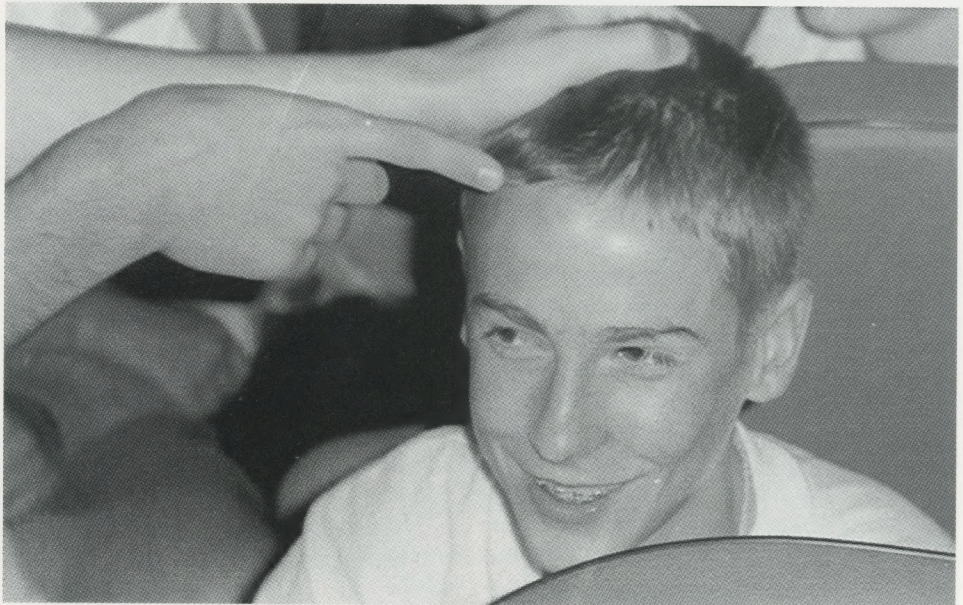

Others found a way to profit from the nuisance.

"I used to make my friends pay for gas," senior Andrea Schrader said.

All in all, vehicles were the ultimate ticket to freedom, style, and a handful of problems. story by Leah Ross

On the Offensive

Students Battle with Ribbons

Since elementary school, students have participated in Red Ribbon Week each October. Usually occurring at the end of the month, students adorned red ribbons given to them at school.

High school students did not tie ribbons around trees and fences. They showed their drug awareness by dressing each weekday to a different theme. The organization of the theme days was made possible with the support of P.R.I.D.E.

Monday started the week as "Red Day" with students attired in red. The following days included "Plow Over Drugs" with overalls, have a "War on Drugs" with camouflage, and "Put a Lid on Drugs" with hats. Friday concluded the festivities with a "Beach Bum Day," which coincided with the pep rally theme.

"A lot of people dressed up to support drug awareness week, so I think students realized we do have a drug 14 Theme Days problem here," junior Brittany Lowrance said.

Students were also encouraged to wear a red ribbon.

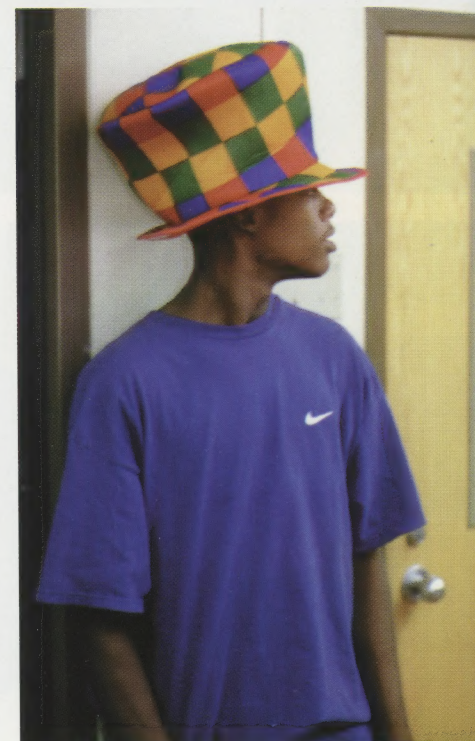

"Wearing the ribbon with the clothes made us think about why we were dressing up," freshman Aleah Holley said.

If theme days were not enough to arouse interest in drug prevention, an assembly concerning the issue was held in the gym for the entire school. It consisted of a one woman act by Suzy Vanderbilt.

"It's fun dressing up and the speakers are good," senior Mandy Marsh said.

Nevertheless, some students refused to believe that anything school-related would have an impact on their choices.

"You could tell who cared and who didn't by who dressed up," freshman Taryn Stanley said. by Leah Ross

Spring Brakes Umbrellas Provide Shelter

Lawn chairs were folded up. Pools were covered. Swimsuits were placed in drawers, and the sun hid behind the clouds. Spring Break had just begun.

While many students looked forward to sunny weather and tans or just getting out during their Spring Break vacation, the weather had different ideas. For most of the week, temperatures remained in the 60's, and the roads were quite slick.

Nevertheless, students still followed through and wore their vacation t-shirts all over the country.

"We couldn't swim that much down in Padre, but we still made the best of it," said senior David Johnson.

Or the beaches, students were forced to find alternative ways to entertain themselves, such as going to the local shops, the mall, or playing cards.

At the opposite end of the spectrum, the ski slopes, proved to be less disappointing because the weather was more suitable for snow skiing.

"Skiing was a blast," said junior Julie Schoppa.

However, not all students travelled more than thirty miles from their homes. Instead, they worked, slept, or just "hung out" during the soggy week off.

"I made some extra money working more hours," said junior Amanda Whittaker.

At-home tanners were defeated by the rain.

"I have no problem staying home during Spring Break, but I would at least like to have some decent weather," said senior Andrea Schrader.

Underclassman could still look forward to hopefully brighter high school spring breaks.

Rollin' in the Dough

Banks Flood with Students Paychecks

The beep of the time clock resonated with the shrieks of the employees who just received their paychecks. Although most paychecks never amounted to the price of a car, three out of five students worked weekend and/or after-school jobs to someday be able to slide behind the wheel.

Students received a limited variety of jobs from which to choose, since white-collar jobs were usually designated for college-educated adults. However, locally owned businesses and fast-food chains offered part-time jobs from which students could profit during their spare time.

"Finding time to work, do homework, and hang out with friends is sometimes hard to do," senior Randy Small said.

Students, who could not find a balance between homework and a part-time job, chose to work the weekends only.

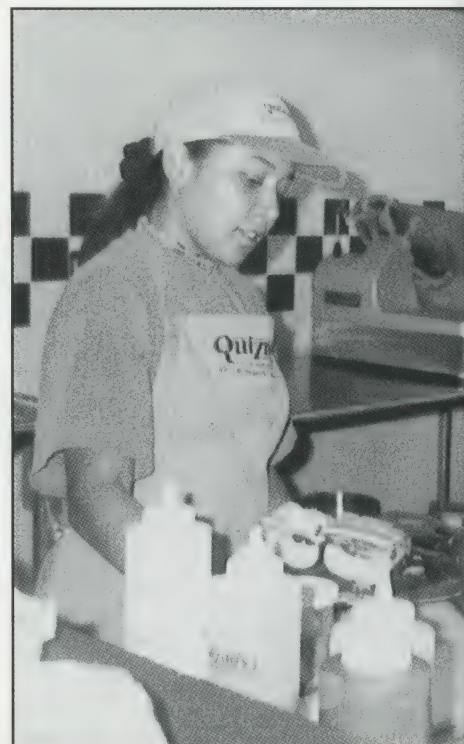

"I try to work as many hours as possible in order to make my car payments on time," junior Holly McAnally said.

Most students did not want to make a lifetime career out of their jobs, yet they did find enjoyment in jobs when some of their coworkers happened to be friends.

"My job is kind of fun because most of my friends work with me," senior Katy Daniel said. "Plus," she added, "I make new friends of all different ages."

Even if students did not like their jobs, they chose to view them as a learning experience.

Opportunity Knocks

School Offers Friends

Perhaps homework was not very thrilling for high school students, but being stuck in school gave students the opportunity to make many new friends and meet all different kinds of people.

Because schedules did not always guarantee that students would have their friends in their classes, students sought out new friends to add to their growing list.

"Sometimes when none of your friends are in your classes, you make a whole new set of friends," junior Ben Jones said. "Even if you don't socialize outside of school with them, you still have people to talk to during class."

Others who moved into the district had to try even harder to adjust to the new environment and make new friends. Not only that, but they tried to stay in touch by corresponding with their friends at other schools.

While some students changed groups of friends, others kept the same group of friends.

"I've had pretty much the same friends throughout high school," senior Ryan Spuler said.

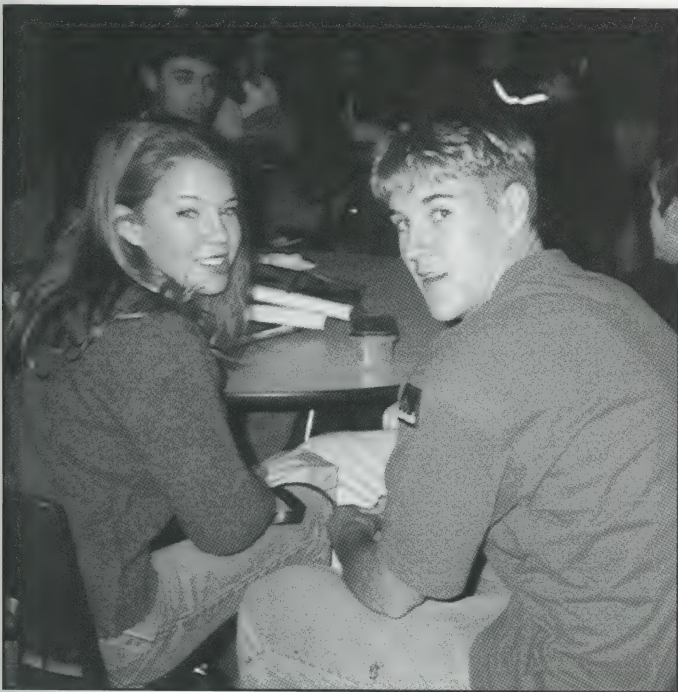

"I talk to my friends in New York about once a week on the phone, and we write back and forth constantly," junior Melissa McKeon said, who moved to Georgetown during the year.

Another problem that rose among friendships was the intrusion of a boyfriend or girlfriend.

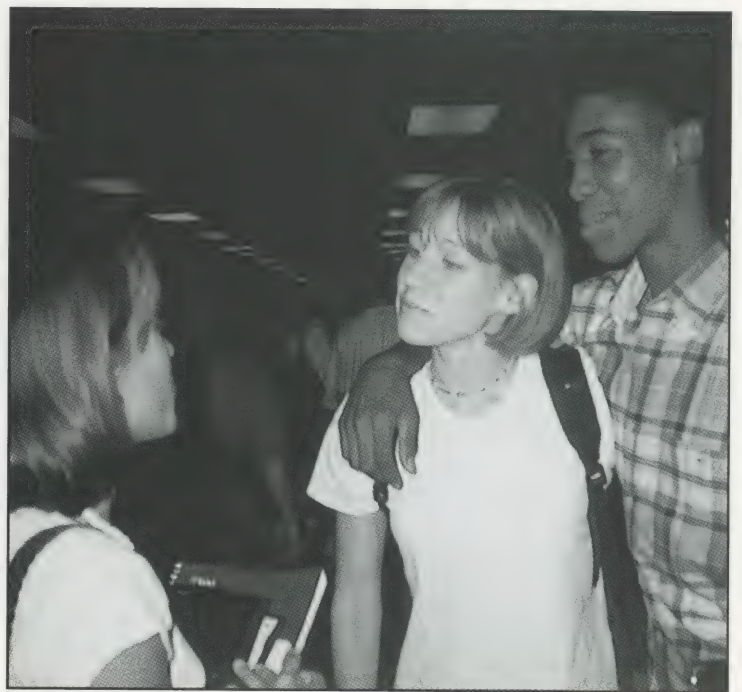

"It's hard sometimes to divide my time between my girlfriend and my friends," senior Ryan Carlton said.

Others had no problem including their friends in outings with their girlfriend/boyfriend.

"Whenever my boyfriend and I get together, we often have my friend and her boyfriend come along with us - it's pretty fun," junior Kara Clark said. by Leah Ross

Growing Pains

Students Forced to Accept Changes

Whether students came to school for the first time or the last, changes in the school campus awaited the return to classes. Faculty and students were forced to make adjustments, producing varying amounts of stress on the new school year.

As more people moved into the town, the district was forced to construct a school adjacent to the highschool. But there were other changes still needed for the high school. Inside classrooms, the rumble of bulldozers and the drilling of bolts could be heard throughout the school. A new fine arts center, additional parking lot, and a new field house were being constructed.

"Having a big freshman class made everyone realize how crowded we would be next year with the same number of students or more," freshman Kim Wallace said.

The cafeteria invited Marriot to redesign the service and food choices available during lunchtime.

There were five different lines that offered various kinds of food: salads, soups, pizza, yogurt, bagels, Mexican food, and hamburgers.

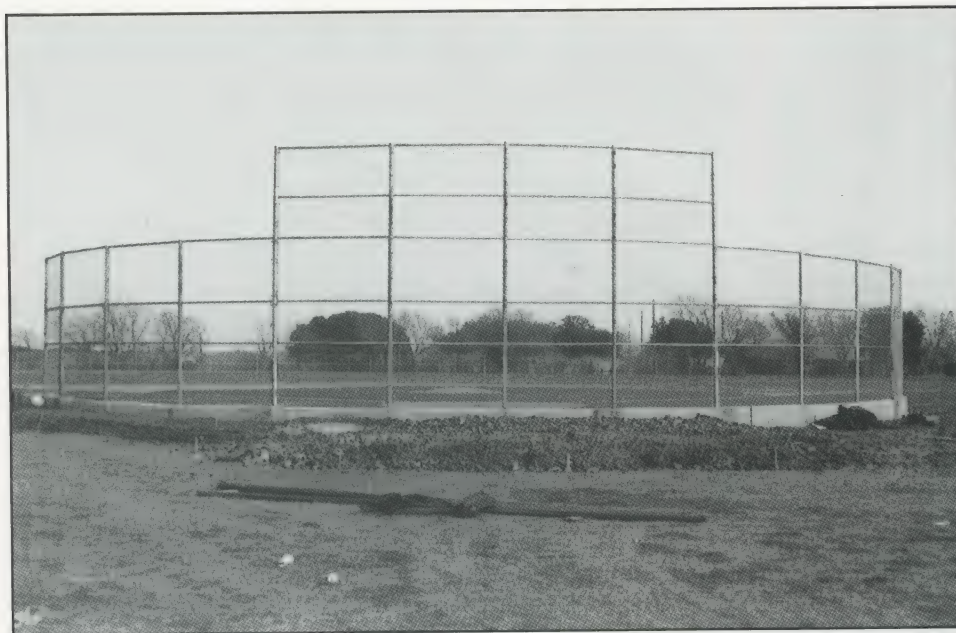

"The food lines are so different," said junior Rebbeca Hayes. "Prices have gone up, but the quality hasn't changed." pany lunch initially became slightly more chaotic. Sometimes students spent half their lunch period waiting in line for food.

"I hate having only five minutes to eat," senior Karen Coburn said.

In addition, some foods went up in price, such as the ever-so popular chicken strips.

Besides the negative effects of the changes, hope remained in the students and faculty that the additions were necessary for a growing school district.

"I'm glad our school is making an effort to make our school a better place," senior Erin Campbell said.

Hobbies are Us True Colors Shown

If physical qualities were not enough to distinguish one student from another, personal hobbies definitely were.

Hobbies ranged from drawing to film making, and from recreational games to playing the guitar.

During the summer, students had much time on their hands to start and keep at their hobbies. However, when school started, they were forced to work their hobbies into their schedules.

"I used to practice drumming with my band for entire days, but when school started, I had to try to fit it in after and on the weekends," sophomore Austen Ross.

"I'm usually sleeping after school, so I do my hobbies on the weekend," freshman Jonathan Applewhaite said.

Others had ample time to pursue their hobbies.

"I can play two games of racquetball at the rec center every day," junior

Gary Carillo said.

Some hobbies could be much simpler than practicing talents or collecting stamps or coins. Choices included listening to music or going to the movies. These are timeless hobbies almost everyone participates in.

"Music is probably my hobby. I don't really play any, but I like listening to it and going to concerts," junior Jeneke Heerema said.

Others could not say they had a hobby.

"I don't really have a hobby. I do all sorts of different stuff," sophomore Lois Wright said.

A new hobby that has popped up in recent years is "surfing the net." Computers, although expensive, allowed people to communicate with others all over the world in chat rooms.

Support Skyrockets Pep Rallies For All

It's the last period of the day, and students are fidgeting in their seats, awaiting their release. Fortunately, on many Fridays throughout the year, their release is earlier so that students can cheer the Eagles to victory at the pep rallies.

At the start of the football season in the fall, there is a pep rally every other Friday, usually for the home games. The cheerleaders, with the help of their sponsors, Christie Slape and Terri Krenak, designed each pep rally two weeks before showtime.

"It's hard to get ideas for what to do for pep rallies as we get more into the school year," junior and Varsity cheerleader Lindsey Roberts said.

Generally, each pep rally starts off with the "Fight Song" and the "Star Spangled Banner". Also included during the pep rally is the "Wongaboom", "Charge", and "Hey!". The school song finishes it off. The Georgetownes usually remained dancing and cheering on the side, with occasional dance presentations.

The cheerleaders led the cheers and participated in many of the skits they designed.

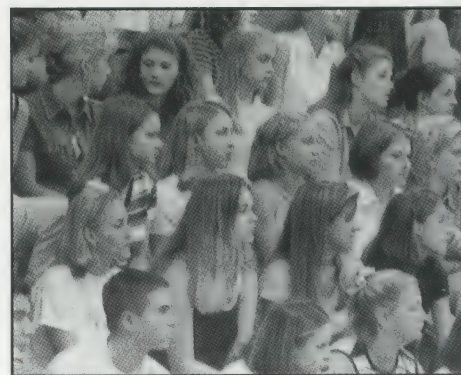

Two of the most memorable pep rallies were the "Men in Black" pep rally and the "Beach Bum" pep rally. The "Men in Black" pep rally included parents dressed as "Men in Black."

"The Beach Bum pep rally was fun because of all the student participation, but the actual pep rally itself didn't work out as planned," Roberts said.

Sometimes it was difficult to get the players who were participating in the pep rallies to come to practices because they had to avoid getting their concentration off their upcoming game.

All in all, Mrs. Slape and the Varsity cheerleaders were pleased with the increase in student participation and support.

"What we also accomplished this year was evening out the number of fall and spring pep rallies," Slape said. "That way all the soccer, basketball, and baseball players felt equally supported." by Leah Ross

Each year school creeps up earlier and earlier, shortening summer jobs, vacations, and freedom for students and teachers. This reduction of free time made it difficult to return to the daily routine of school life. During the summer break, some students took exciting and unforgettable

"I mostly worked but when I had a chance to vacation, I took the opportunity," said junior Lindsey Roberts.

Strike a Pose Guys Get Vogue

Everyone gazed up in awe as what appeared to be supermodels in evening gowns strutted across the stage. However, the room soon filled with uncontrollable laughter as they looked past the hour-glass figures and saw the leg and facial hair.

The Año Nuevo Pageant, held every January, stirred up its usual riot at Williams Elementary School. It was sponsored by the Spanish Club, and one contestant could be elected to participate from each school organization and sports team. Miss Año Nuevo has been a high school tradition since 1978.

The pageant, em-ceed by Spanish club members Seth Killingbeck and Jessica Poisson, began with an introduction of each contestant. Next, the group of contestants performed an opening number, consisting of a dance choreographed by Elena Garcia and Rachel Romo.

Afterward, the individual competitions began. Some memorable talent competitions were ones in which teacher and judge Mr. Fisher was involved. Seniors Beau Bell and Shad Ahmed sang their hearts out to him in emotional rage while seniors Doug Starnes and Ross Jackson gave him a makeover.

"Wearing lipstick is one of the worst experiences I've had in my life," Mr. Fisher said.

The next competition was the evening gown competition, which with so many good-looking men in gowns, was hard to judge.

"I've never felt so violated," senior Alex Tsankov said of the evening gown competition.

Perhaps sophomore Jay Mason's sign worn around his neck said it best: "I am not a piece of meat."

After the intermission with live entertainment from the Varsity cheerleaders, the winner of the pageant, Mason, was crowned Miss Año Nuevo.

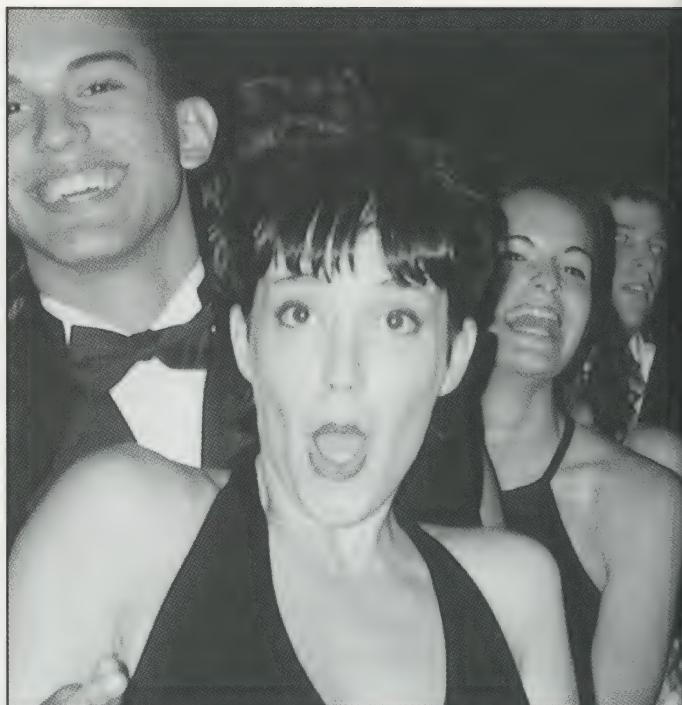

"I never knew that two bags of flour and a rope could get me this far in life," Mason said. by Leah Ross

Dancing Back In Time A Nineties Prom With a Shakespearian Twist

The 9th of May marked a busy schedule for girls and very few guys. Early in the day Georgetown students began getting formal for their 1998 Midsummer Night's Dream Prom. Numerous fashionable girls began getting ready by having nails, hair, and makeup done professionally.

"Getting ready was such a hassle, because I had to do FIVE MILLION things in three hours, though ironically I enjoyed it at the same time," junior Leah "Cool" Ross said.

Groups and couples got together when everyone was made over from head to toe. Various landscaped sites, such as Sun City and Southwestern, were used to capture great memorable pictures before the night started.

A short travel to Austin was taken to eat and dine in elegance. This was one of the special times that students would pay an extreme amount of money for good food.

"We ventured to downtown Austin for a snazzy night in a busy city where our group ate at The City Grill," senior Laura Brosch said.

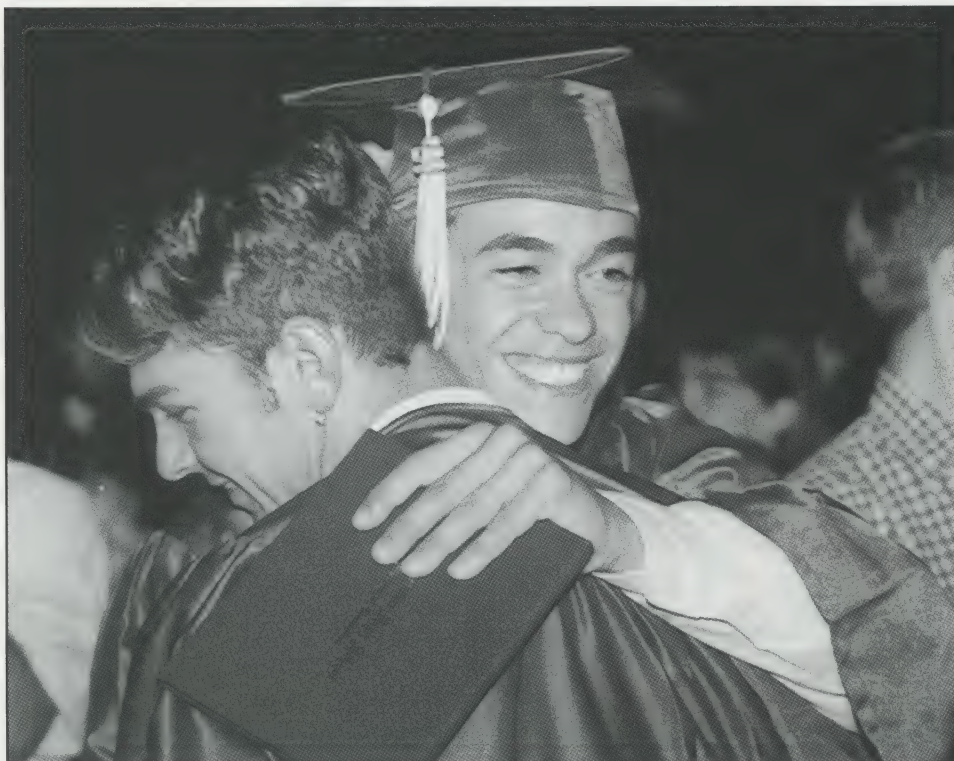

This year's prom took place at the Doubletree where last year's was held, since our first choice, the Renaissance Hotel, double-booked. This prom's music was provided by a DJ with various musical hits from Tag Team to the most recent 'I Will Remember You'. Prom queen was taken by Ashley Coufal and Shad Ahmed accompanied her as prom king.

After taking in all the dancing and excitement, the night was not about to end. Post prom parties and get-togethers were just beginning and would last to early morning. by Amy Wilson

I Spy Something Blue Graduates Color the Field

Just because the last day of school had come and gone did not mean that seniors could start their summer vacation, a thing called GRADUATION still had to take place.

The day before graduation, seniors climbed out of bed to attend the mandatory graduation practice in the sweltering summer heat.

"At practice everyone was acting kind of goofy at first, but when Mr. Cargill explained just how serious this was, we straightened up in order to get it right and finish," senior Brook Hampton said.

On commencement night, Eagle stadium was packed with family and friends, who watched with anticipation the graduation of their anxious seniors.

Salutatorian Paul Stoltenberg addressed the crowd with a history lesson of commitment and dedication through the past lives of famous people.

Valedictorian Laura Umstattd reminded her fellow seniors of Fish Day '94 and the many tortures from the upperclass men. Along with the four-year straight wins of hall decorations and the successful varsity football season due to many senior players. The class of 1998 prove to make a difference at Georgetown High School, forever with positive Eagle pride.

"I felt kind of sad because I'll always be able to see my family, but I wouldn't see some of my classmates for years after this," senior Ryan Meyer said.

Perhaps the toughest part of graduation was over, but the party had just begun. A group of parents had arranged Project Graduation, an all night party with games and fun for all seniors, called Casino Night. It provided an alternative to other unsafe activities.

Swimming, karaoke, velcro wall, and volleyball were just some of the outlandish activities that took place in early morning hours. Through each activity students received play money that would be used for the auction later.

Basics

Requirements Count

Freshmen and seniors alike had a common bond in one area, scheduling core classes, the basis for every student's necessary graduation requirement.

Apart from teachers trying their hardest to teach, block scheduling has drawn classes out. Students, therefore, found it more difficult to stay awake and learn.

"Since I don't come to school until noon, I find extra time in the morning to catch up on sleep," senior Scott Knussmann said.

From english to math and science to history, teachers expanded on the various techniques they employed to teach. Costumes and applied knowledge pushed the envelope by getting students involved in the lesson. Some english classes required students to dress and act the part of assigned characters in literature.

On the other hand, math teachers began the day with a problem that required students to apply earlier knowledge to discover new formulas and concepts.

"I get frustrated by the problems Mrs. Rodgers puts on the board," senior Azalea Flores said. "But whenever I can't solve it, it makes me want to learn how to do it even more."

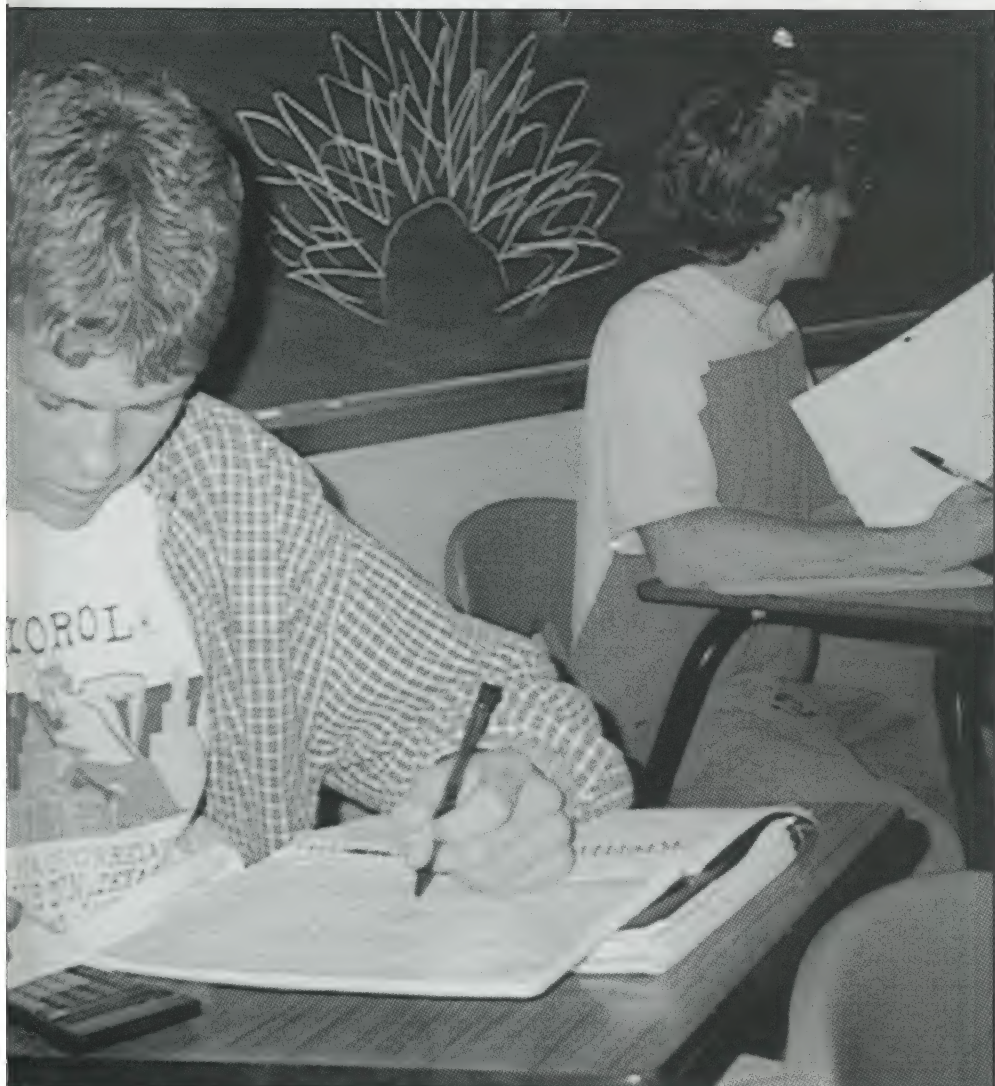

Labs and role playing games did the same for science and history. Video clips and film strips also helped students break the monotony that lecture and assignments caused.

"I enjoy watching movies. I get more meaning from the video than just the book alone," sophomore Greg Palmer stated.

No matter the class, the basics served as the stepping-stone for institutions of higher learning.

"Who cares about college, I've got a life.," freshmen Grant Myrick quoted. by Jesus Gonzalez

Perfection

Mastering the Arts

Fingers twitching, eyes static, and mind exploding, at long last the painting was finally finished and ready to enter competition.

Aspiring artists and those who just wanted to learn the basics had two choices from which to select. Art I and II focused on the fundamentals of art and how to execute these proven techniques.

"Although all my art work is done in pencil and charcoal, I found Art I to be helpful when it comes to the painting aspect of it all," freshmen Vincent Reynolds said.

On the other hand, Studio Art History guided students through the lives of famous artists. The intent of the class was to learn the various art techniques of the studied artist and incorporate them into original student work.

"I do like learning about famous artists, but I like my art work the way it is," senior Jared Perez said. "I do like to use someone else's techniques for a change."

Those who chose to not express their ideas with paper and pencil had the opportunity to take dance. Dance took students through the fundamentals of numerous types dance styles encompassing folk to modern.

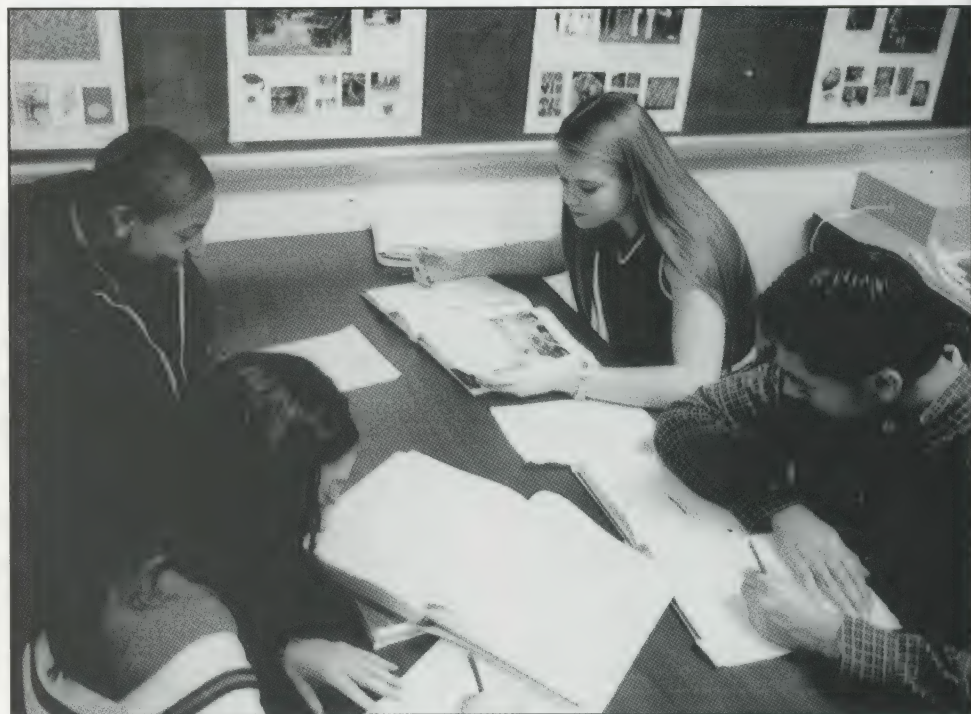

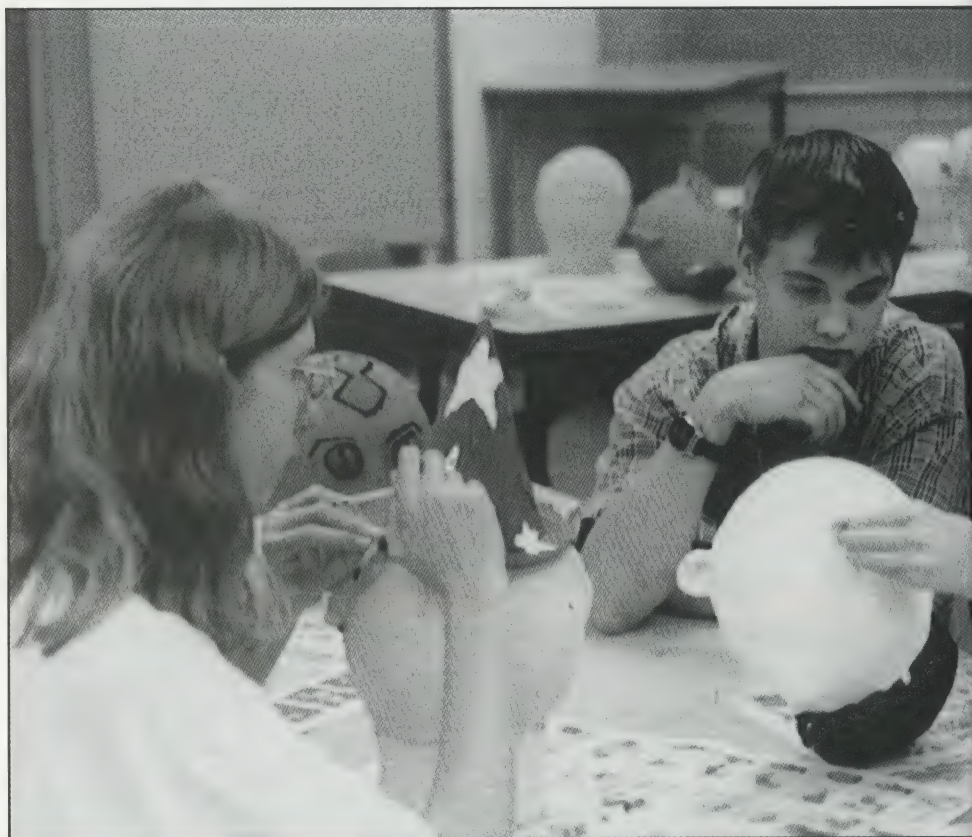

"This is the best way in which to get a PE credit," junior Jaime Carlsen said. "I especially like the warm up music."

Students inclined towards the performing arts enrolled in theatre and band. Hours of dedication and hard work were put to the test at copious concerts and dramas.

"There's nothing like competition to get the blood flowing," junior Christina Hurtado said, "but the most exciting thing is wining."

Regardless of the way in which students felt the need to indulge themselves, fine art courses were offered to cater to students who wanted to distance themselves from the masses. by Jesus Gonzalez to be prepared to start their seasons once school began.

Students were welcomed back by numerous changes. These improvements were implemented by the administration in order to create a more efficient, yet enjoyable campus. With the construction, a new lunch menu, and other new facilities, there was much excitement at Georgetown High School. Although construction was underway, students and teachers knew it soon would be completed.

"I hope this year turns out to be different and more successful than the rest of my high school career," said senior Jeff Moravec.

"So I'm going to make it my best and live it to the fullest."

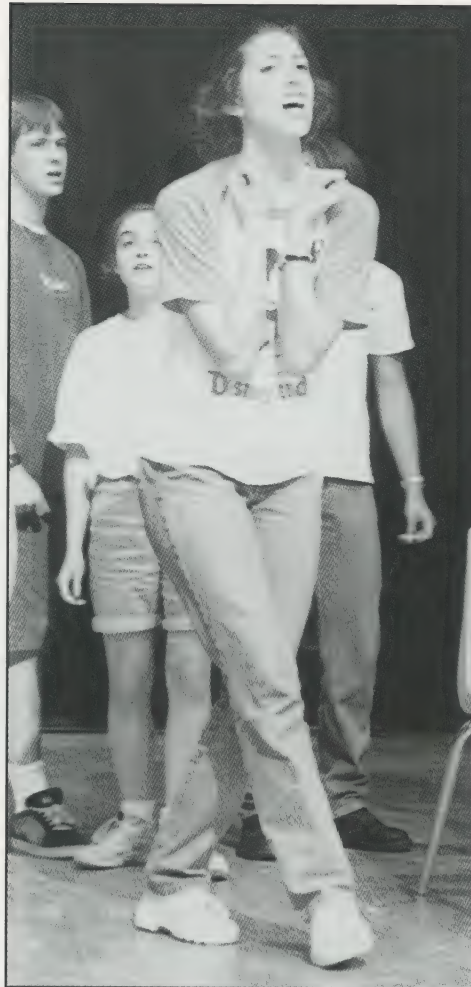

This year numerous students were added to the high school's growing population. This increase made the halls crowded, but after several weeks, the crush of bodies became just another obstacle to overcome. Great achievements and commendable efforts made the year worth remembering. From sport successes to academic excellence, students displayed tremendous amounts of spirit and school pride. Choices

Picking A Fancy

No longer just fillers on students' schedules, electives offered life and work skills which gave added experience in preparing one for the real world.

Drafting courses, Manufacturing Graphics and Construction Graphics, allowed those students who were interested in fields of architecture and design. With the use of AutoCAD, the drafting software used as the industry standard, students learned fundamentals. In Construction Graphics students tackled floorplan design.

"Since I plan on majoring in architecture, I find Manufacturing Graphics has given me an extra head start," junior Josh Baron said.

Vocational classes such as Welding and Automotive Technology furnished useful trades that gave students worthwhile work skills. Students faced with technical problems had the capacity and proper tools to attack them.

"The idea of being certified by a local business is neat," junior Gary Carillo said. "That means that I will be able to command good money for my trade."

Health Care Technology, Culinary Arts, and Early Child Care Professions gave students "internships" at businesses which specialized in the given course. Interaction with certified professionals and patrons allotted students a feel for actual employment and responsibility.

"Hospitality has given me an insight for the world of food services. Now I know the requirements and challenges that await one in this profession," senior Roxanne Gauna said.

Local business owners took such electives in deep consideration when looking at students for employment. This was a prime example in which it was important what one knows and not whom one knows. by Jesus Gonzalez

Accented

Languages Engulf

If ever dropped in a foreign country where no English was spoken, the foreign language department hoped its curriculum had achieved its goal, allowing students to survive the encounter.

French, Spanish, and German spearheaded the goal of enabling students with comprehension of the languages. Thus, allowing understanding and communication with those of a foreign tongue.

"The coolest thing that I liked about German was the student exchange program," junior B.J. Radtke said.

Although Latin is no longer spoken, solo Latin teacher Marietta Mugford encouraged students to apply Latin composition to English grammar. Since Latin serves as the basis of most of scientific terminology, those students who were interested in scientific and medical fields leaned towards Latin.

"I find myself using Latin in both English and spelling," junior Aleia McCord said. "I like the fact of being able to use both almost interchangeably."

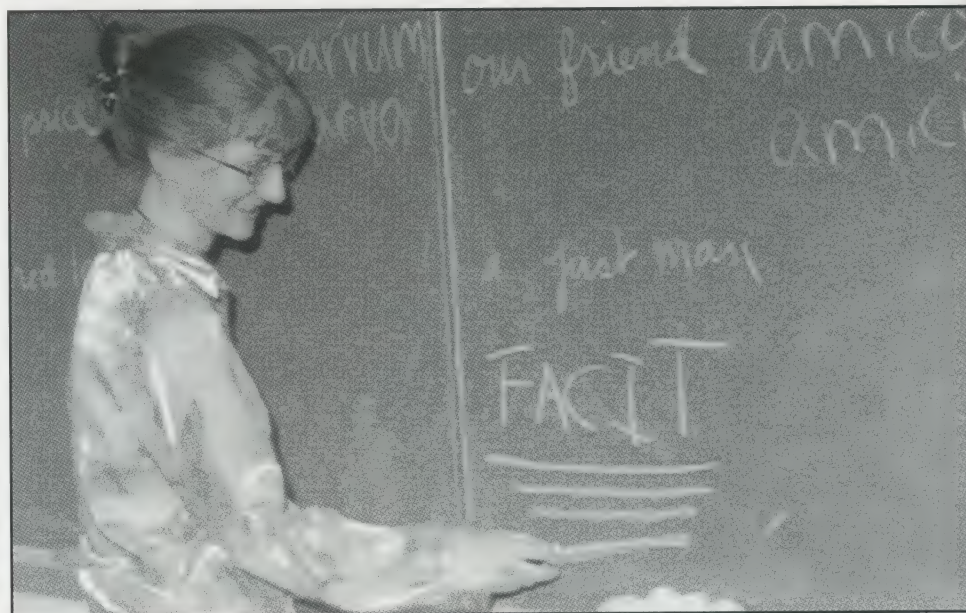

In past years, foreign language classes were offered to all students, but by the fall of 1998, that will have changed. With the building of the freshmen center, ninth grade students will be clipped from all languages.

"I think that freshmen should not take a language, high school itself is already overwhelming," sophomore Nick Dennis said.

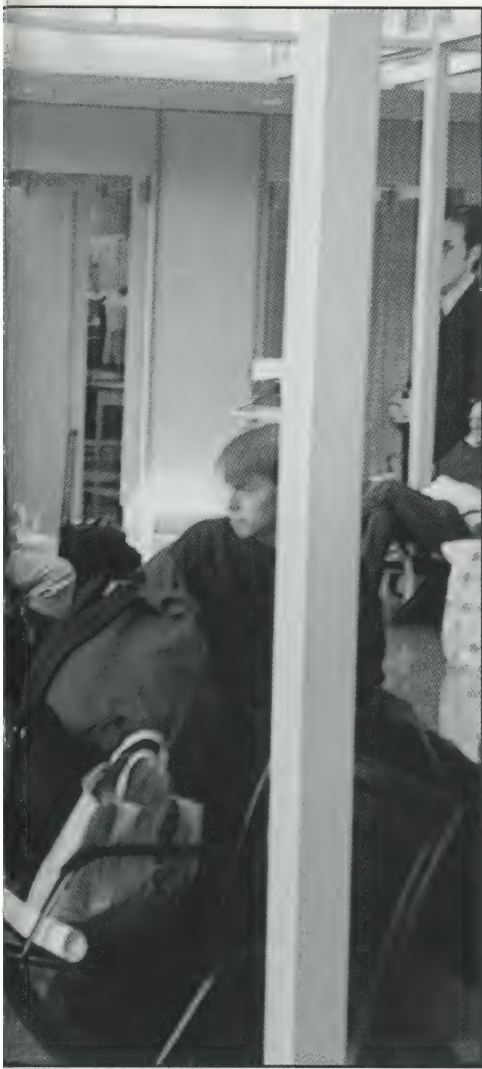

Besides learning their respected languages, each class had its own way of incorporating the culture from which it was derived. Spanish classes were taught Mexican Christmas carols that were shared with adjacent classes as a form of good will. German classes ate traditional foods and learned of custom dances.

Whatever the liking, foreign languages had abundant things to offer all.

"I like the break that Spanish gives me," junior Georgina Torres said, "I find it to be much easier than English." by Jesus Gonzalez

Excellence Dedication Rewarded

Countless hours studying and memorizing information had finally paid off. Once again it was time for the annual Academic Excellence Reception and naming of the Rotary Scholars.

For those students who had hit the books or by luck had been gifted with a photographic memory, their time had come to shine in the community spotlight.

"I think it was long in coming that the school honor hard working students," junior Ben Jones said, "it's reassuring to know the community also supports our academic efforts."

Rotary Scholars were the first to be recognized academically during the year. The requirements for becoming a Rotary Scholar included being a senior in the top five percent of his class. Their dedication was rewarded with a free jacket.

"I can't think of a better way to be rewarded for what I've been doing than with a free jacket," senior Alex Tsankov said.

For juniors and underclass men who were not eligible for Rotary Scholars, the Academic Excellence Reception was their time to shine. The top academically ranked students in their class were honored at the reception.

"I get goose bumps every year when they make us walk across the stage," junior Alice Kemper said.

Among the speakers and presenters, honored teachers were awarded plaques by the senior class in attendance. Those who were honored included History teacher John Thomas, Psychology teacher Jesse Fisher, Band teacher John Klett, and junior high Science teacher Vicki Ventura.

"I liked to see the reactions and listen to the speeches that each teacher gave," sophomore Caroline Sweet said. "They're as unique as each teacher is."

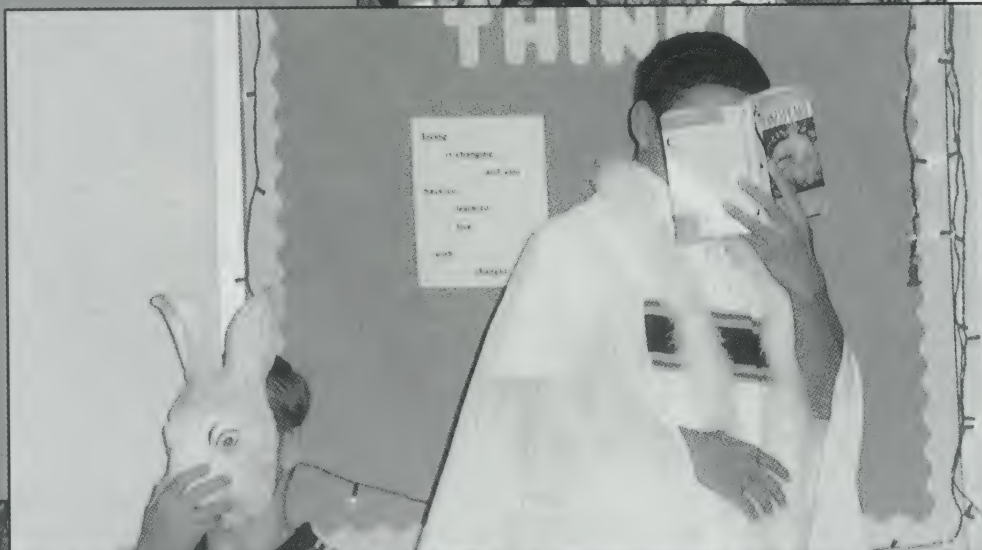

At the end of the reception, all that remained was the knowledge that grades must be kept up in order to have a shot at attending again next year. by Jesus Gonzalez

Time Flies

Weekends Acquire Wings

The school parking lot looked as desolate as it did during the summer. To the majority of the students, the weekends were just a shortened version of the summer.

Weekends were usually spent working, going to parties, or staying the night with friends. Doing homework was often delayed until Sunday evening. For those who worked or played sports, weekends just were not as long as they used to be.

"I can hardly find time to play football and go out with friends in just two days," junior Russell Zahasky said.

Other students were involved in so many extra-curricular and off-campus activities that home became just a place to sleep.

"I have so much to do on the weekends with church and band that I'm hardly ever home," junior Julie Schoppa said.

Frequently, band, cheerleading, sports, Georgettes, and U.I.L. meets used tremendous amounts of weekend time.

Yet, some students refused to view weekends as a time to do homework. In stead, weekends were a valuable time to go to the movies, shop at the mall, take trips to amusement parks, go to concerts, and go on dates.

Whatever the plan, most students obeyed the words of junior Patrick Roppolo: "Live it up!"

Sometimes students were so busy on their time off, that they never recovered during the following weekday from the lack of rest.

"By Monday I'm just ready to sleep for twelve hours straight," junior Bethany Brown said.

If fatigue swept in, homework was often placed even further on the back burner.

"If I don't make sure to do my homework here and there on the weekends, I will never catch up during the week," senior Dee Dee Hu said.

Striving for a balance between work and weekends throughout the year served as a valuable skill for future independence. However, most students realized that by the time they graduated they would have to begin the struggle again. by Leah Ross

Seniors 1998 Victorious Another Decorating Success

A tradition as defined by Webster's Dictionary is the handing down of customs by practice. The class of 1998 started a tradition when they won the hall decorating contest as freshmen in 1994.

"When we were freshmen, we really had no idea what to do, and we still won! It was such a surprise!" senior Shawna Gentry said.

That trend of winning continued for the next three years as the class of 1998 evolved from the lowest of the low, as freshmen, to ruling the school as seniors.

The homecoming hall decoration contest, sponsored by student council, gave classes a chance to pull together and have fun while working towards a common goal.

The seniors had chosen a 70's disco theme for the years competition. They chose to decorate with large versions of album covers, from prominent artists of the 70's like Pink Floyd, The Doors, Jimmy Hendrix, Aerosmith, and The Village People.

In the middle of the mass of albums was a "Club '98", which was to represent a disco night club. Flashing lights, dance music, and even a spinning mirrored ball made the look come together.

"When I got to school that night to decorate, there was already quite a bit done. I was amazed! It was hard to believe that I was still in Georgetown High School!" senior Erin Negron said.

A wide variety of seniors, all from different walks of life, came pouring out of the woodwork to lend a hand, and in some cases a few strands of colored lights.

"It seemed like everyone really pulled together this year. Even if the person you were working with wasn't your best friend, it was still o.k. We united as a class. At that moment, we really felt like seniors." Senior Class President Shad Ahmed said. by Corrie L. Snow

ROLLING STONES... Following many hours of tedious and tiring work, the senior hall decorators pose by the mouth with their tongues out. "This is the fourth time for our class to win. We're so proud! I think this year was definitely our best!" senior Ashley Coufal said. photo courtesy of Shad Ahmed

We've Got Spirit in Our Shirts

SENIORS 1998... "Band Babes"
Brooke Henderson, Emily Polasek, Amanda Allshouse, Danielle Hartman, Kasey Moseley, Jody Johnson, Kim Stump, Devon Blanck, Lizzy Thornton, Amanda Savoy, and Liz Ramsey don yellow shirts to express their excitement about graduating.

SRS '98 ROCK... While expressing their true feelings Seth Killingbeck, Corrie Snow, Doug Warden, Robyn Bassett, Shad Ahmed, Beau Bell, Chris Rogers, Allyn Crain, and Alex Tsankov let the world know that Srs '98 Rock!

GHS SRS 1998... While walking across the field to exchange school gifts, Student Council Seniors Emily Polasek, Holly Craig, Erin Vargo, Tasha May, Shad Ahmed, Chris Rogers, Seth Killingbeck, Laura Umstattd, Allyn Crain, Mandy Moya, Doug Warden, and Brittany Rhodes display loyalty to their class.

There is no doubt that the Seniors of 1998 were full of spirit by the many ways they expressed themselves. One of the more colorful ways of showing one's spirit was to don a painted T-shirt and join a group of friends that shared a common pep.

"We just got together and had a "shirt-making-party"! It was all so much fun!" senior Amanda Allshouse said.

The T-shirt makers had no easy task. The group first went to a hobby store, where materials including paint, glitter, sequins, fabric, and puff paint were purchased. Prices ranged drastically from a couple of bucks a piece to up to and over ten dollars, depending on just how fancy the shirt was visioned to be.

"We bought a huge two pound bottle of glitter and used all of it on our shirts," senior Marissa Matthews said.

Not all T-shirts turned out perfectly the first time though. Making the shirt that's just right often took more than one attempt.

"We made our shirts the night before with little kid size T-shirts because that was all we could find. Then we weren't sure that all of the paint would be dry. Everything worked out alright, even if the shirts were a little tight," senior Robyn Bassett said.

Senioritis Rising

Year's End Brings Early Symptoms

Living through three years of high school with the dream of graduation just around the corner, impatient juniors became harder and harder to control as the school year began to wind down. With the hopes of the next year being their last, some juniors began showing early symptoms of senioritis.

"I'm feeling really good about this year and the upcoming one," said junior Cory Staufer, "I can't believe there are only a matter of months 'till I'm a senior!"

In the realm of high school life, your class position was an important identity. If you were an upperclassman, then that meant certain advantages including finally being able to drive to school, the option of new and exciting classes and earning a tad bit more respect than the freshman and sophomores.

"Being a junior has helped me gain respect from my friends that are still underclassmen," said junior Adam Rogers.

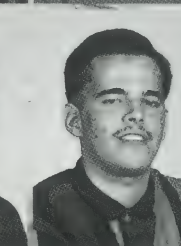

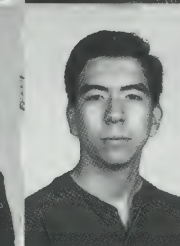

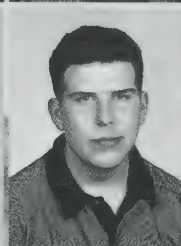

One item that definitely separated the waters of the classes was the senior rings that were ordered and delivered during the junior year. Upon spotting one of these shiny rings in the hall, there was no doubt that this person was indeed an upperclassman.

"The dumb company lost only two rings in the entire school," junior Jordan Sainz said, "And what ticks me off is that mine was one of them."

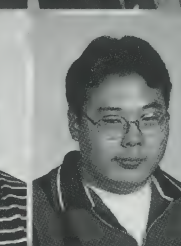

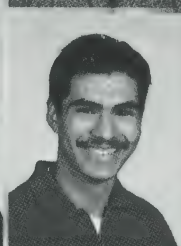

With rings on fingers and opportunity lying ahead, the wait was finally over for many juniors as senioritis took its toll. story by Greg Myrick

Junior Class Memories

Finally after an entire three years of putting up with high school life, juniors could look back and say "Whoa, look at what I've done," either in positive or negative form.

As juniors, the students were one year away from their senior year and had compiled many memories that were both of good and bad times. These memories were, without doubt, worthy to be kept and treasured for all eternity through the years of school that they had endured.

"I look back now and realize just how great these memories are," said junior Julie Schoppa, "And most of them are of spending time with my friends."

With years of experience under their belts, the junior class optimistically looked forward to the new experiences that awaited them. story by Greg Myrick

Sophomores Living it Up Loud

Facing Challenges of the Year in Style

Being a sophomore had its advantages and disadvantages, as do most things in life. In the sophomore year of high school, most students go through the process of Drivers Education and get their licences. Some even end up cruising in their very own automobile. Though some cars were more fashionable than others, all that mattered to most was the cars ability to carry them from place to place.

"Driving has been a really good thing for me," sophomore Kevin Brennan said. "My mom doesn't have to pick me up and take me everywhere now!"

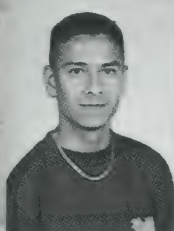

Being a sophomore did hold a strange position for some students. No longer were sophomores the new kids that all of the older ones were really interested in, nor were they old enough to be upperclassmen with all of the upperclassman privileges.

"During my freshman year, everyone was sort of interested in the 'freshmeat' as some call it!" sophomore Cathaleen Wright said. "Now that we're sophomores, it is harder to be noticed."

Though there were some challenges facing sophomores, most were able to overcome them and have a superlative sophomore year. story by Corrie L. Snow

We Will Survive

As a new bunch of freshmen were thrust into the hustle and bustle of high school life, they tried hard to survive. There was more homework, more social events, a plethora of clubs and activities, and sporting events to participate in and spectate at. Many freshmen found themselves overwhelmed.

"I didn't think that I could survive with so little sleep," freshman Lauren Lawhon said. "I use any spare time I have to catch a nap."

It is said that change is not necessarily bad, and many freshmen found that to be true. With the transition and change from the life of middle school to high school, many were pleasantly surprised with how much they ended up enjoying it.

"There is always something to do around here," freshman Jake Schwerking said. "I have had the most fun just being spirited!"

As the final freshman class drew to a close, some underclassmen rejoiced that the year was over, while others were saddened. This class would not soon be forgotten. It was a year of new sights, sounds, and experiences that could never be relived. by Corrie L. Snow

I Remember

Teachers' Favorite Teachers

~A teacher touches lives forever~

Anonymous

An old saying but possibly one that is true even today. Every student, at one time, has had a teacher that has had a lasting impact on their lives. Teachers are no exception.

Barbara Boatright-Photojournalism/Yearbook

"My high school journalism teacher, Larry Dorsett. He led an interesting life--everything to army intelligence during the cold war, to Associated Press reporter, to high school journalism teacher. He always had an open door and an open mind."

Jerry Heaney-Content Mastery

"Searl Pickett, my high school band teacher. He was a WWII prisoner of war. While being held in a prison camp in Germany, his jaw was shattered by Nazi soldiers. After the war, he returned home and became an accomplished classical and jazz musician and he introduced us to these musical forms. He was a contrast to the good nuns that taught us in other classes. I will always remember him."

Rosanne Cantu-English/Reading

"My high school chemistry teacher, Jane Fischer. She was my cheerleader sponsor as well as our class sponsor. She was a steady, positive influence in my life when I was having problems at home. She was always positive, enthusiastic, energetic, thoughtful and kind. She also was a great Chemistry teacher. She was a fantastic role model for everyone!"

Christie Slape-Spanish/Cheerleading

"My high school Spanish teacher, Connie Kunkel. She was creative, patient, understanding and motivating. When she found out I had become a Spanish teacher too, she sent me a huge bouquet of flowers--right to my classroom. When my students asked who the flowers were from, they couldn't believe that they were from a former teacher! "Someday," I said, "You'll understand when you have a teacher who believes in you like Mrs. Kunkel believed in me."

Honoring the Society

NHS Expands In The Community

The National Honor Society set high standards this year requiring members to exhibit qualities of leadership, service, and academics.

NHS was involved in many activities within the community. Saturday mornings students spent time reading to children at the library.

"I like to see the children interested in books," junior Laura Howard said.

At Annie Purl, students spent time teaching English to non English speaking citizens.

"It is interesting to learn their language, to teach them our language and to get to know them," junior Nicholette Lawson said.

NHS also set certain service hours per semester. Students were required to complete six service hours and four literacy related activities by semester's end.

During March and into April, NHS sponsored a book drive in competition with Leander High School. The class collecting the most books was awarded an ice cream party. By collecting approximately two thousand more books than Leander, NHS met and surpassed its initial goal.

"It is fun to know that you can do something for your community and make it a better place for everyone," senior Tim Boff said.
by Allyn Crain and Kandi Currier

WE DID IT...Expressing joy at winning the book drive, seniors Shad Ahmed, Sarah Lough, Erin Vargo, Alex Tsankov, and Michele Carlson display books collected by the classes. The book drive received recognition for the community and school.

Buzzing Along

Student Council Busy as a Bee

Homecoming Week, Mr. and Mrs. GHS coronation, school wide elections, Rally Rags, and a dialogue over race and ethnic issues were just a few of the projects undertaken by Student Council during the year.

"If student council does their job well, you don't notice them," senior Allyn Crain said.

The purpose of student council was the promotion of student government on campus. The council is composed of six-eight officers that are elected by the entire student body, six representatives from each class, and two senators from each class.

There were benefits to being an active member in the council while participating in many of the major events on campus. Active underclassmen were allowed to run for council officer and involved seniors were invited to apply for the A.W. Tanksley scholarship.

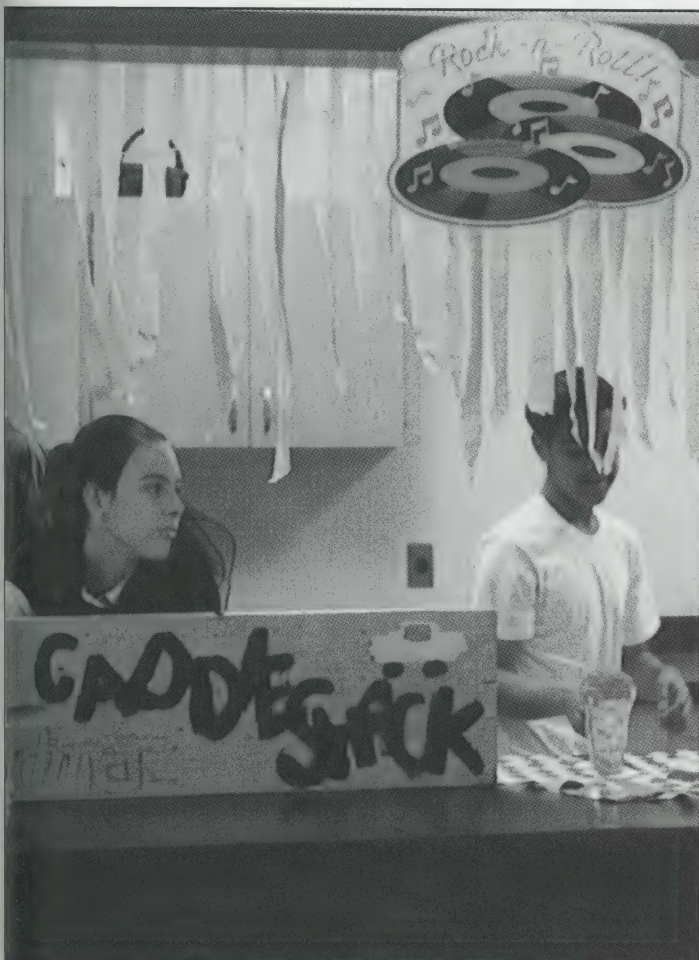

About 30 active members worked on the first big project of the year, Homecoming before school even started. Not only did they sponsor and choose the themes for the traditional hall decorating contest between classes, but they ran the election of the Homecoming nominees.

In January they were responsible for the election and coronation of Mr. and Mrs. GHS. Other projects throughout the year included hosting the school dances after football games and running the concession stands at basketball games.

However, student council created some different projects, Rally Rags and a "Race and Ethnic Issue Forum."

"We wanted to do something to capture the school's excitement. Within three days we created 500 Rally Rags for the home playoff game," senior Shad Ahmed said.

Marching On

Band Conquers Killeen

With a music selection of Rogers and Hammerstein, the GHS Band was a spectacular sight at the football games and on the contest fields of Killeen. Selections played included Oh What A Beautiful Morning, Do Re Mi, and My Favorite Things.

Striking such dazzling formations as bouncing circles and executing awe-inspiring 'free-forms', the Band marched away with top honors.

Following the marching season, the Band's three primary sections: the Concert, Symphonic and Honors, broke off and began working on separate pieces of music for the concert season.

"We really put a lot into it this year," said senior Russel Klein, "We really worked hard."

The Concert and Symphonic Bands both received a 2-2-1, with a 1 being the highest. The Honors, under the direction of Mr. Rodney Klett, earned straight 1's and the right to advance on to Sweepstakes.

Early in the year the Band hall extension was begun, scheduled to open with the '98-'99 school year. This much needed expansion will harbor a larger main band hall and sound-proof practice rooms.

"It's about time someone looked at the band hall and said 'this could use some renovation'," said freshman Robert Benner.

New York, New York

Choir on the Move

For many years now the Choir hasn't just been singing. They dance, act, put on productions, do fund raisers, and go to exciting places.

"I loved going to New York," Regina Bush said, "because it is such an exciting and bright place."

The Choir has done many fund raisers to raise money to pay for their trips. Car washes, bake sales, a garage sale, and an concession stand at football games were their main fund raisers.

"I like the fund raisers," said sophomore Justin Provance, "it gives me something to do on the weekends."

Choir students enjoyed performing in front of crowds. In the talent show, three of the finalists were the Choir students. Many of the choir students performed in the Georgettes spring show. Students went on to "area" in UIL contests. The Chorale group of choir went to New York City and performed at Carnegie Hall.

"Performing is the best part. It gives me a thrill," said sophomore Jessica Best.

Incoming Gettes Land Victorious

Neon hoops, enormous music notes, and old wing pants began the year.

This year was the first year that the Georgettes took four team dances to competition. 1998 found the Georgettes competing in two state wide competitions; one at Westwood and one in Galveston.

Winning Sweepstakes at both competitions was accomplished by making a score of 90 or above on all dances. The Georgettes also won Gussie Neal Davis awards and a Judge's award for their novelty dance. All four of the solos and the two ensembles received Division I honors.

While in Galveston, the Georgettes did more than just dance. The first two days were 120 Georgettes reserved for competition. The trip then took a more relaxing turn with visits to Moody Gardens and the I-Max Theater.

For the first time the Georgettes held their Spring Show on two consecutive nights, although it was harder work.

"The crowd wasn't as big because of both nights, but it was more fun to do it twice," sophomore Amy Hutchins said.

Over all, it was a great year. "Being a Georgette is hard work, but if you play things right you'll have done something you'll never forget," senior Jessica Estrada stated. by Heidi Mersiovsky and Kristie Williams

Cheerleaders Elevate Spirits

Cheerleading was a year-round commitment with summer camps, fund-raisers, try outs, pep rallies, and more! Through rain, sleet, or snow, the cheerleaders never failed to be on the sidelines cheering the Eagles to victory.

Over the summer, the cheerleaders attended camp at Texas Lutheran University. There, they were awarded the opportunity to compete at the Cheerleading Nationals. The fifteen girls that went were chosen by judges at TLU.

"The camp was exciting and fun in that I met a lot of new people," junior and varsity cheerleader Laura Carr said.

The cheerleaders sponsored a summer camp for children from kindergarten to sixth grade. A total of one hundred and fifty children were involved in this summer camp.

The funds for the cheerleaders were limited to the money raised by car washes, fund-raisers, and donations from local companies.

This was the first year the cheerleaders elected to attend all varieties of games and meets.

"Our major was to make sure that all the sports had spirit and support," cheerleader sponsor Christie Slape said.

Cheerleaders continued their commitment to elevating spirit by giving each team a "send off" to each game. In the event that the team made it to playoffs, the cheerleaders attended these games to show school spirit and pride.

"Being my first year on varsity, it was a lot of fun," junior Lindsey Roberts said. "I'm really going to miss the seniors." by Alissa Carter and Kandi Currier

We, the Jury

Teen Court is now in Session

If you ever get caught speeding or driving recklessly, you might have to go to court. Teen Court, that is.

How Teen Court works, once you get stopped by the police and you attend GHS, you get to go to court. Once you get your court date, you wait.

"I think the waiting is the hardest part," said sophomore Ben Durham, "I would just want to get it over with."

Once given a court date, you are assigned a student attorney. Student attorneys are either juniors or seniors.

"I like that people our age are defending us, because they can kind of relate to what we've done," junior Jessica Webernick said.

You then plead your case before the 12 to 15 student jurors and a real life judge. After the prosecutor and the defending attorney give their summations, the jury decides your fate. If found guilty, levels of punishment can vary, depending on how severe the crime.

"Being on the jury isn't always easy. Sometimes you have to punish your friends," said sophomore Priscilla Jones.

Basically, there are two possible sentences; how many hours of jury duty and how many hours of community service. Service hours are usually spent at the library, the court house or other places that rely on volunteer help.

"It's not very fun to do the punishment, but you have to say, 'that's what I get,'" said sophomore Amanda Stephens.

Act One

Stand Up and Take a Bow

Copious characters pranced across the stage as the theater group mystified the crowds with their off the wall humor and de-ranged antics. This alone was one reason why attendance was high at every production.

The first production, directed by drama teacher Koerth Karasek, was Relationships. This was the first acting role for many students, including sophomore Jay Mason, and juniors JoDee Wilson, and Aleia McCord.

"Relationships was a very interesting and fun role for me to play," senior Jenny Turner said.

Drama teacher Monica Regan directed the second performance, The House of Bernarda Alba, which was the one act competition play in UIL. At district, seniors Jenna Kelly-Landis and Jenny Turner received Honorable Mentions. Junior Liz Parrott was awarded an All-Star Cast Award.

"This was the best time for me to show my acting talents," junior Liz Parrott said. "And all the hard work payed off."

The final production, directed by Regan, was Shakespeare's a Midsummers Night Dream. This performance marked the final appearance for the seniors. This list included veteran actors and actresses such as seniors Doug Starnes, David Spence, Kim Cockerell, and Tara Beaver. The performance was unique for the inspired usage of a kiddie pool on s t a g e .

"This has been the funniest play that I have performed in during my four years here" senior Tara Beaver said. "And I loved the dunking of the cast in the kiddie pool!" Beaver added. by Tara Beaver and Kandi Currier

Language Clubs Raise Money

Foreign Language clubs offered students the ability to expand their cultural horizons.

The Spanish, French, Latin, and German clubs had fund raisers for the year.

The Spanish club started the year selling grass skirts, straw hats, and flower necklaces for the Beach Bum pep rally. The Spanish club hosted the Miss Ano Nuevo pageant. The money from the pageant went to a scholarship for the Spanish club members.

"The Spanish club was a blast this year," junior Melissa Henderson said. "I liked the idea of supporting the pep rallies."

The French Club spent the year selling enormous suckers as a fundraiser. In the fall some members were able to attend a Renoir exhibit in Fort Worth.

The German club was notorious for selling candy, which hungry students were eager to buy.

"The German club is great! You learn about the culture, and how to organize parties and fund raisers," junior Thomas Kerrik said.

Once again, the Latin club sold their traditional holiday candy grams for Christmas. The club chose to award club president Chris Crichton with the money raised as a college scholarship.

Key to the Future

Key Club has a Lock on Involement

Stars lit up the hallways of the school one morning, and students were anxious to find their name among them. No it wasn't an audition for show biz or a psychic reading. Instead, it was the Key Club's "The Stars are Coming".

Although it was one of the smaller clubs on campus, the Key Club accomplished a number of activities, ranging from putting flags up in Jarrell where the tornado hit, to collecting spare change in salt cans to help combat iodine disorder in developing countries.

"We collected $500.00, and when 5 cents worth of salt could save a person's life, we felt we were making a difference in the world," senior and Key Club president Ashley Confal said. Key Club also used holidays to their advantage. On Halloween, members donned costumes and went trick-or-treating for canned goods. Four laundry baskets full of food were gathered and distributed to needy families.

Christmas found club sponsor Cheyenne Kennel played the violin, and Key Clubbers sang Christmas carols room to room to nursing home residents.

At Easter, members sponsored an egg hunt for low-income kids at the Mary Baily day care. A pancake breakfast with the Easter Bunny was used as a fundraiser.

Ailing children at Childrens Hospital were cheered by members visits, games and crafts activities.

At year's end, members could feel a sense of accomplishment for their service in the community. by Leah Ross

Serving the Community Everyone Involved

With over two hundred members in Serteen, the club had the distinction of the club with the largest membership.

Serteens were involved in several projects to help the community over the year. Club members logged in over four thousand hours of projects for the community which is about four to five projects a month. These projects included: Service Day '97, the M.B.A. "Hoop-It-Up" in Austin, Project Share and much more.

Service Day '97 involved repainting the playscape and clearing trails in Cedar Breaks Park at Lake Georgetown.

"It feels good to know that you are doing something for the community that will help it grow and become a better place for everyone," senior Erin Vargo said.

Project Share was a community wide drive for the collection of clothing to donate to organizations such as the Caring Place.

The Serteens sponsored a lock-in at Acrotex for all campus clubs to join.

"The main goal of Serteen is to build leadership in students," senior Shad Ahmed said.

Serteens also gathered clothing and miscellaneous objects to donate to nursing homes, Texas Children homes, the Jarrell Relief project, and the Rape Crisis Center.

"The club is organized so that everyone has fun doing anything," sophomore Adam Pfluger said. by Kandi Currier

Half-Way There

Clubs Grasp Future Careers

If students were looking for clubs that would help them with their future occupations, FFA, FHA, FTA, and HOSA were good places to start.

FFA (Future Farmers of America) was designed to give students who enjoy raising and showing animals, a chance to learn leadership and management skills.

"Even if I don't end up having a career in agriculture, I still enjoy participating in livestock-related activities," junior Samantha Hobson said.

F H A (F u t u r e Homemakers of America) enabled people to learn about domestic activities such as cooking, designing houses, and sewing. Projects included feeding the homeless at the Salvation Army in Austin once a month. They also went to a state conference in Houston. Coupon cards and selling popcorn served as fundraisers.

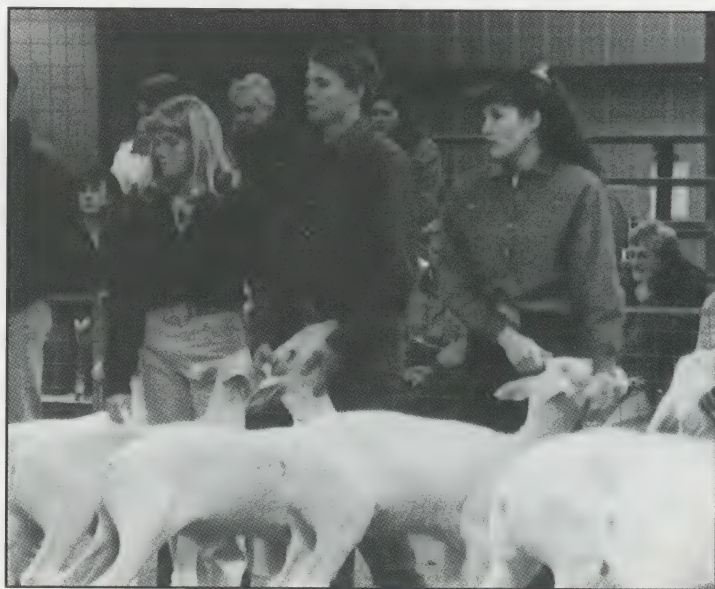

"I learned a lot about leadership skills by being on FHA/HERO," junior April Barnett said.

FTA (Future Teachers of America) let students step inside the classroom and be in the shoes of a teacher.

"These skills can be valuable to everyone," senior Kasey White said.

HOSA (Health Occupation Students of America) offered students interested in the health field first-hand experience. Not only did members visit hospitals, but fifteen students attended a Leadership Conference in January and competed in various Health Occupations events. HOSA is also responsible for the fall and spring blood drives.

"In this club I didn't learn just how to sell popcorn (for a fundraiser); I learned skillful in a field of study I know I'll always be active in," junior Julie Schoppa said. by Kandi Currier

All For One

Clubs Gather Different Cultures

Among the clubs that gave to the community, there were also clubs, like UNITY and TAME, that strived to raise the consciousness of cultural equality.

UNITY (Uniting Nationalities in Today's Youth) helped to unite students from different cultures and races.

"Being from Mexico, UNITY let me share my culture and learn about the many cultures in America," sophomore Samara Leon said.

One of the projects UNITY members participated in was celebrating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday in Downtown Georgetown.

"It's important to acknowledge the people like Dr. King that helped unify America. His ideas are part of the theme of UNITY," junior Isela Miranda said.

They also arranged and sponsored the Cinco de Mayo celebration during school in the courtyard.

TAME (Texas Alliance for Minority Engineers) helped people gain knowledge in engineering careers, and arranged for members to participate in math and science competitions.

To raise money for trips to information fairs, TAME members sold homemade breakfast tacos before school.

"These clubs are great because you don't have to be a minority to join. They're open to anyone," junior Orlando Cardona said. by Kand Currier

Young Clubs

No Experience Necessary

Although the Psychology and Studio Art History clubs were just babies compared to most of the other clubs, they did not fail to accomplish projects and socials.

Psychology Club, a three year old club, was sponsored by psychology teacher Jesse Fisher. The members could be anyone who was interested in helping out the community.

The club has a few projects that they have been doing since it started, such as the Salvation Army soup kitchen and the Christmas Head Start Party. Members help serve food at a soup kitchen in Austin to the needy.

At the Head Start program, members buy presents that can be passed out to those children enrolled in Head Start.

"Some people are misled by the name 'Psychology', and they think we sit around and analyze people. But actually, it's just another club that is concerned with the welfare of others," club president senior Jeneke Heerema said.

The Studio Art History club, sponsored by art teacher Carrie Smith, obtained its members from the Studio Art History class. Anyone in the class automatically became a member of the club.

The major project of the year was the Art Exhibit Contest in the library in December. The pieces of art, submitted by students, were judged by Paul Winberg, a well-known local artist. The Studio Art History club members hosted the event. Winberg would critique their art if students requested him to.

Members also visited the Renoir Exhibit in Dallas and the Winberg Gallery.

These trips were financed by the Blow Pop selling fundraiser.

"This club was a good opportunity for students to see famous artwork and learn about art without having to travel to Europe," club president senior Katie Daniels said. by Leah Ross

Staying Focused

"When I joined the photo club I didn't know any thing about my camera and I didn't take very good pictures," said sophomore Alissa Carter, "Now I feel confident when I shoot pictures of my family and friends."

show sponsored by Studio Art History club. In the photography section a non-member of the photo club got first place. Dustin likes to wear his glasses. But the next three places was one by members of the photo club.

"When Mrs. Boatright encouraged me to enter my picture in to the art show I was a little skeptical," said sophomore Scott Gifford, "But after I got second place I felt better about the pictures I take."

Reaching Out

Students Grab Chance to Help Others

Finding ways to help people in the community outside the school and practice Christianity with fellow students was made possible by clubs such as PRIDE, PALS, and FCA.

PRIDE (Peers Responsible in Drug Education) contained members who realized the drug problems and wanted to educate their peers about drugs. Providing skits, assemblies with guest speakers, and programs for elementary students was all part of their goal to inspire their peers to find fun alternatives to drugs.

"I think getting everyone to sign the Prom Promise really made people take Prom night more seriously," senior Marissa Mathews said.

PALS (Peers Accepting Learning and Sharing) allowed high school upper-class students to serve as positive role models to kids. Activities to make students feel comfortable in school changes included freshman orientation, a new student introduction, and work with elementary children.

"It would just make my day to see kids be entertained and appreciate it when I would read to them," junior Nadia Morales said.

FCA (Fellowship of Christian Athletes) led by Coach Butch Spruill, designed a way for Christian athletes to pray and study the Bible together.

"FCA is great because it gives me an opportunity to become a more spiritual person," junior Russell Zahasky said.

With these clubs, it was impossible for anyone to feel like they could not make a difference in the community. by Leah Ross

NEWSFLASH

Here s Your Memories

Whether it's one product or several, the yearbook and newspaper staffs have worked all year recording school events in detail.

Many of the Aerie and Talon staff members worked hours before, during and after school to document the school year by taking notes and photographs. In the case of the yearbook, as in previous years, staffers spent a portion of their summer putting the final touches on the annual.

"It was a lot of hard work and constant pressure, but we made it," Aerie clubs editor junior Kandi Currier said.

The Talon staff worked long hours to report various types of stories. The theme of each newspaper was centered around a holiday or upcoming event.

"We just try to give the people what they want to read," said Talon reporter senior Brian Seamann.

Despite the hard work, being on the Aerie and Talon staff had built in benefits.

"I think that my favorite thing about being on the newspaper is getting in free to every school event," sophomore Brittney Birkebach said.

Although dealing with the loss of long-time adviser Pat Easterling, and the gain of an inexperienced teacher, the Aerie staff was able to close ranks and complete the yearbook without undue stress.

"Being the Yearbook advisor is both an overwhelming but exciting job. I have really enjoyed being a part of it all," first-year Aerie advisor Barbara Boatright said.

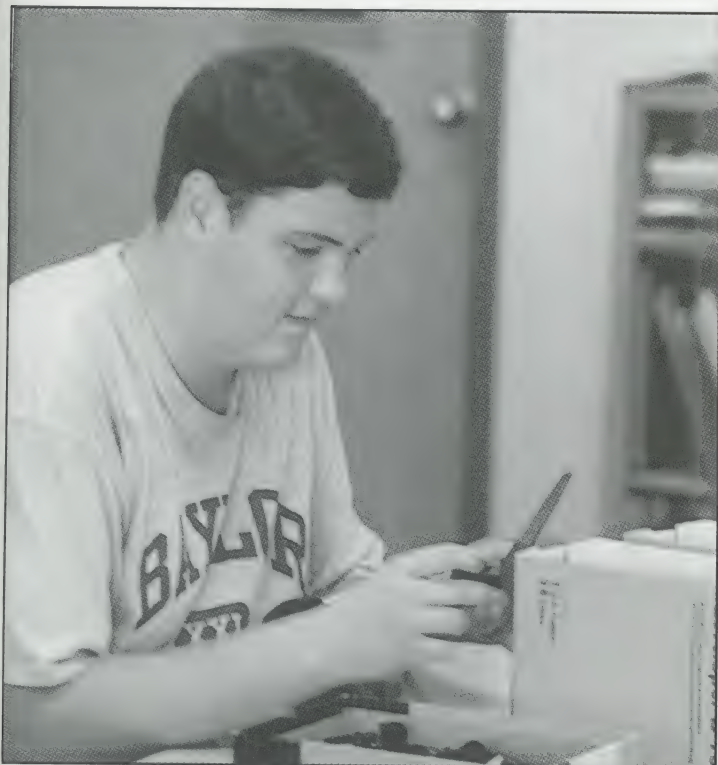

The Talon and Aerie staffs worked hard to keep the students and faculty informed of school events.

Roller Coaster Ride

Eagles Experience Ups and Downs

Under new the leadership of Coach Nema Wesmoland, the Lady Eagles came out digging and spiking hard. With their frequent success, the team quickly became a close knit unit.

"I will miss the seniors," junior Nicole Sandifer said. "We made alot of memories."

On the court the ladies were showing how great they could be with a 13-3 record. Off the court, they were having fun and becoming even closer friends.

After a great pre-season, the Lady Eagles headed into a tough district with Round Rock and Westwood. However, the Lady Eagles played inconsistently throughout district.

At times they played to their potential and other times they fell short of expectations.

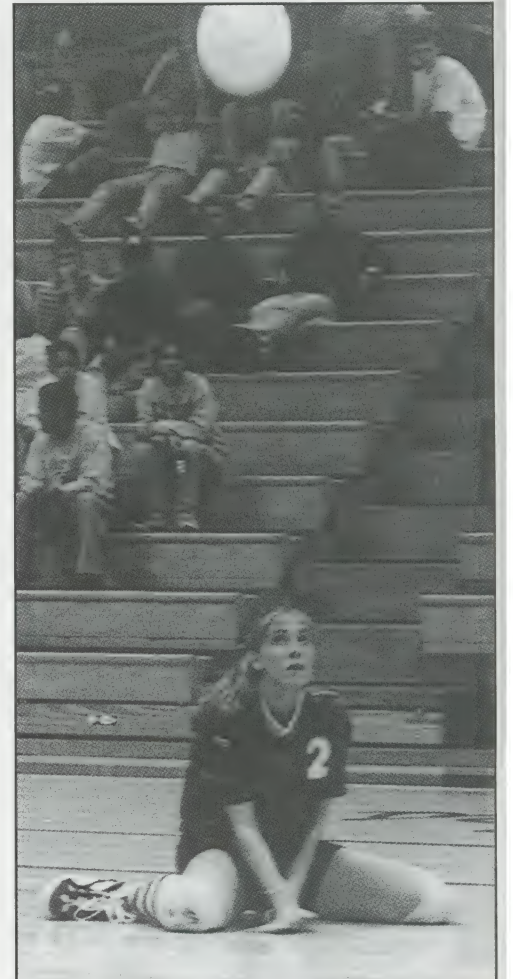

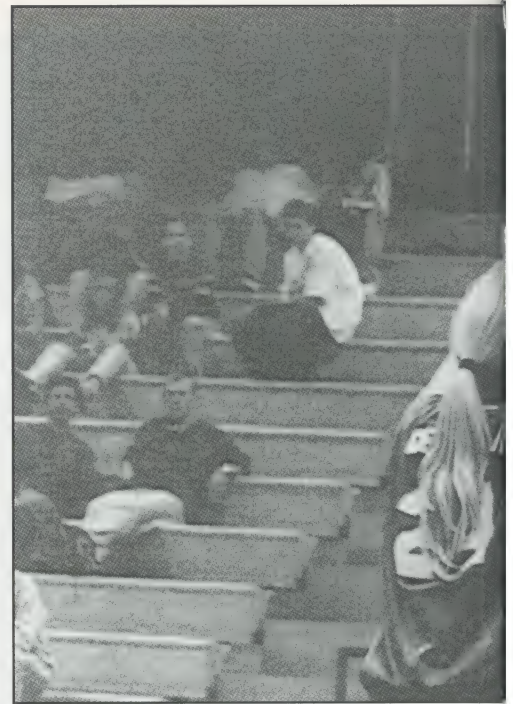

"District was rough, " senior Amber Wood said. " Our whole season was like a roller coaster."

The Lady Eagles played several close games with many coming down to the final point, but ended up with a district record of 3-7.

"We didn't finish as strong as we would have liked," sophomore Anna Hartzell said.

Even though the season didn't end as the ladies wanted, they all agreed they had fun. Next season looks bright for the Lady Eagles as they return eight lettermen to the varsity team. by

Cross Country Makes Statement

Leaving their opponents behind to eat their dust, the boys and girls cross country teams raced to the finish. Both teams trained intensely each morning, beginning at 6:30 am, hoping to equal the successes of the previous years.

Placing in the top two at various meets around the state, the Eagles had a good taste of the tough competition.

"There is alot of good competition out there," coach Kellye Richardson said. "We are going to have to work hard, especially if we want to get back to state."

Both teams took first at district, advancing them to regionals in Arlington.

The girls and boys both had a strong showing at Vandergriff Park; however, only the girls team placed high enough to qualify for state, taking third overall as a team.

"I was a little disappointed in our showing at regionals," senior Jennifer Whatley said. "Hopefully, we do better' at state."

The boys narrowly missed qualifying for state, taking fourth. Qualifying for state as an individual, junior Jonathan Fawcett, finished third overall.

On the coldest day of the year, the Lady Eagles ran in the state meet. With the wind chill keeping the temperatures registering only in the 20's, the girls gave a tremendous effort. Despite the unfavorable running conditions, they finished sixth as a team.

"I'm glad we got to compete in the state meet my senior year," senior Sarah Lough said. "It was a little cold, though." by Rhonda Ooten

EAGLES SOAR

Football Achieves New Heights

The 1997 season began with a never say die attitude that refused to surrender. From start to finish, the season was a rollercoaster ride of emotions.

Beginning with the season opener against the Lockhart Lions and ending with the final seconds defeat by the Temple Wildcats in the Bi-District championship game, the varsity proved "Eagle Fight Never Dies."

For the first time in seven years, the varsity finished with a winning season. Leading the march to victory were 34 seniors. Most notable was the efforts of senior running back Lee Lundin, who tallied an impressive 1855 total yards in rushing. Senior quarterback Matt Hantelmann posted a 127.8 percentage in passing efficiency. With this rating, Hantelmann was ranked second in district standings, rounding out the top-ranked offense in district play.

"We had a great season, with great senior leadership. The guys worked hard towards our goal of being district champs," said Hantelmann.

Not to be out-done, the Eagles' brutal defense forced an incredible 18 interceptions, 11 recovered fumbles and 8 sacks onto opposing quarterbacks. Thus, crushing their opponents in the mighty talons of the Eagle defense.

"We turned Georgetown football around," senior Jake Marshall said.

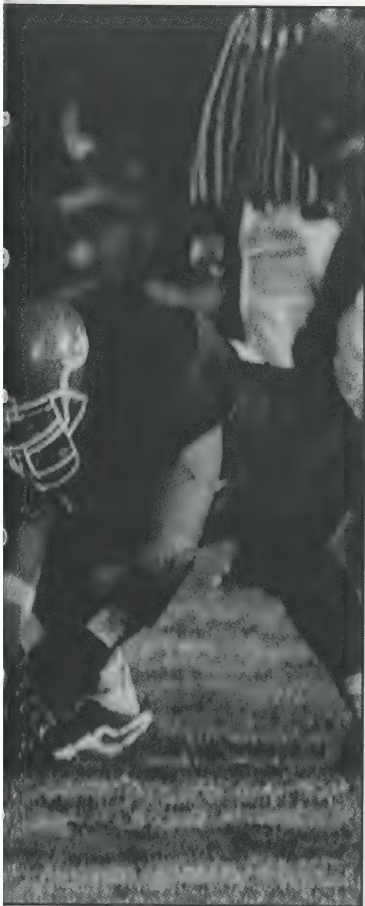

Leading the team in tackles was senior Rockie Browning, with an total of 156 for the season.

When a sports writer from the Austin American Statesman ranked Georgetown at the bottom of the list for the district race, their opponents were taken by surprise to see the Eagles run away with the District 14 AAAAA championship.

With a record of 7 wins and 4 losses for the season, the varsity proved that the road to District runs straight through Georgetown. by Ryan Carlton

Changes Pay Off

Redesigned Teams Victorious

In a gutsy move, the coaching staff decided not to return to the traditional junior varsity "A" and "B" teams. Instead, they directed their attentions to redesigning the existing teams..

With an abundance of talented tenth graders, the coaches had an ample pool of promising players with which to restructure the teams. The JV team was constructed of the juniors and approximately 10 to 15 sophomores. In place of the JV "B" team, coaches added a team made up solely of sophomores.

As a result of these innovative changes, the JV posted an overall district record of 7 wins and 3 losses. Incredibly, the sophomore team finished their season undefeated with an impressive 10 wins and no losses.

"We won all our games and we did it with style," said sophomore player Kevin Brennan.

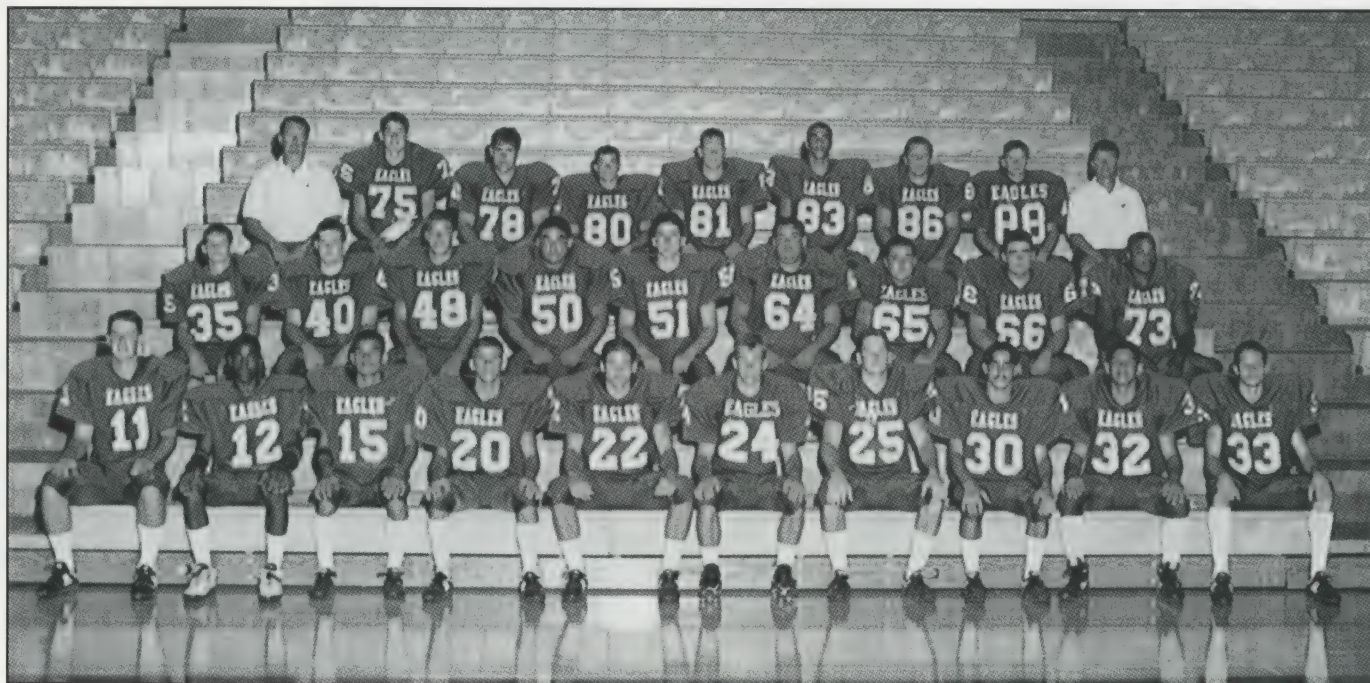

Freshman "A" team finished the season with no wins and 10 losses, while the "B" team ended with 5 wins and 5 losses in district play.

"There's no doubt about it. We had the talent, we just didn't have the dedication," said freshman Jeff Compton.

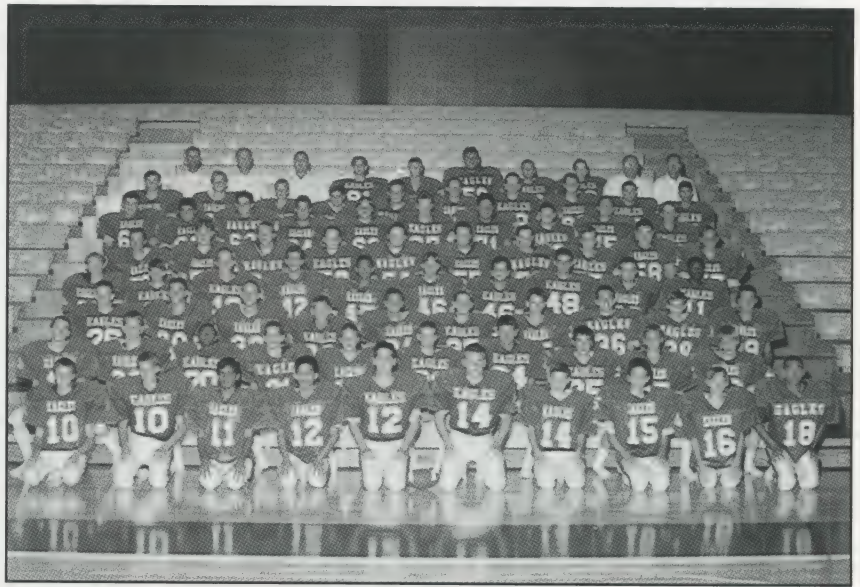

Although the freshman teams did not fare well in district play, many players are eager to put lessons learned on the field to use when the '98 season begins.

"We had the players and the talent, but the teamwork was "iffy". Through hard work and dedication in the off season, great things will happen," said freshman Aaron Mitchell. by Joseph Lourigan

Goals Denied

Hopes for a Season Rebound in '98

With four returning lettermen, the boys varsity basketball team looked to make a run at the playoffs. Enduring afternoon and late night practices, the boys worked toward the season long goal of making the playoffs. However, the team often played inconsistently, trading losses for every win.

"The games we played as a team we won," sophomore Eric Norrell said.

The guys showed they could play with heart and desire as they gave state-ranked Waco High a close game in the Waco tournament.

Focused on their goal of making the playoffs, the boys opened district play with a blowout over Leander. Unfortunately, in many other games they weren't as successful.

"We played close games during district, but it wasn't enough," said junior Jomo Rose.

With several underclassmen on the team, the boys fought with courage against top teams like state semi-finalist Westwood.

"I think next year we are going to have a good all-around team," sophomore Brandon Williams said. by Rhonda Ooten and Becky Ochs

Shooting Stars

Girls Varsity Shines Bright

The sounds of bouncing balls and pounding feet echoed in the lower gym as the varsity girls basketball team prepared for what they hoped would be their best season ever.

"We have an extremely talented, athletic team this year," Coach Rhonda Farney said. "I hope we will be able to do some new and different things."

In preparation for their run at a fourth consecutive district title, the girls traveled to Gillette, Wyoming for a tournament over the Christmas Holidays.

"I had fun in Wyoming," senior Lindsey Holmstrom said. "And I think we learned alot about each other."

After returning from Wyoming, the team blasted through district with a perfect 10 wins and no losses, earning a bye for the first round playoffs.

Amidst a crowd of students, parents, and other fans, the Lady Eagles boarded the bus for their first playoff game at A&M. There they played two games, ousting Tomball and state-ranked Cy-Falls. The ladies then headed to Waco for the regional tournament.

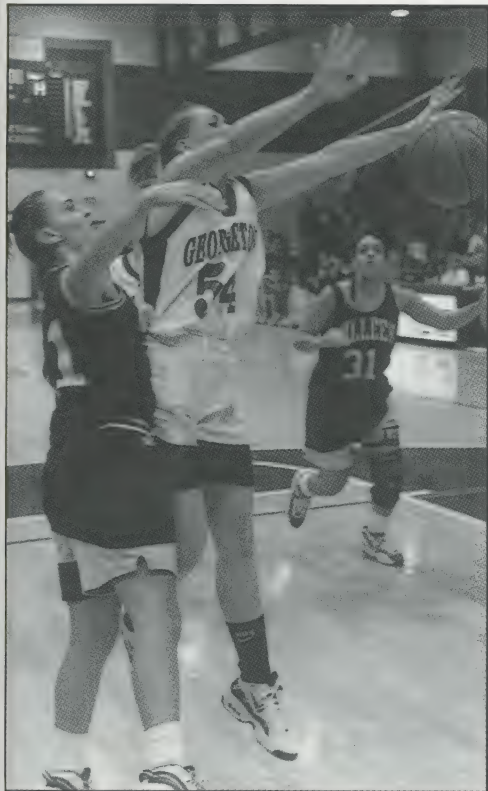

At Baylor, the girls met their match against third-ranked Longview. The game was close, going down to the wire, losing by a mere five points.

"It's very sad that it is all over," senior Claire Swinbank said. "But we played our hardest, so there are no regrets." by Rhonda Ooten

Eagles Merciless at Net

The varsity tennis class had an impressive fall season. After meeting in a double block schedule allowing the team to have time to practice their techniques, the varsity class finished second in district for the fall season. They placed behind Westwood, who eventually became state finalists.

"I felt the season overall was successfully accomplished to our up most standards," said senior Jessica Parker.

Varsity tennis also qualified for the regional tournament. They proceeded on to the regional quarter-finals, but came up short against Plano.

The Spring tennis season also was a winning time for the teams. The girls varsity class placed first in district, as did the girls junior varsity and freshmen.

The boys spring season also finished strongly. Boys varsity took third in district while the junior varsity posted a second place finish. The boys freshman team took away highest district honors by placing first in district play.

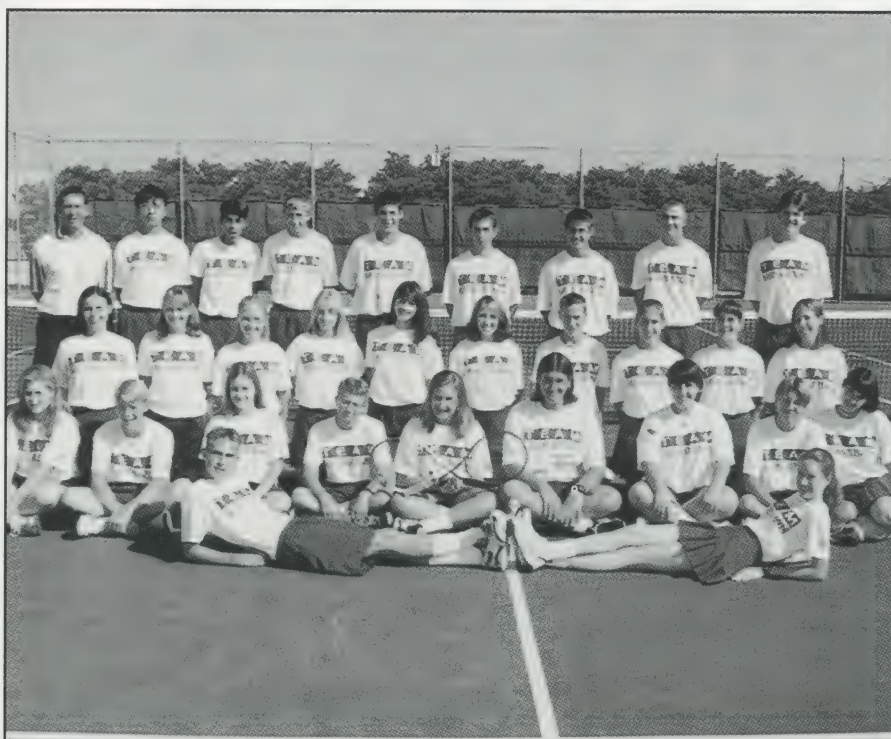

"It was awesome to win district being my first year on the high school team," said freshman Chris Hadik.

Kick Start

Boys Soccer Reach Goals

With already two district championships under their belts, boys soccer was shooting for their third district title in a row. Boys soccer is traditionally notorious for turning in winning seasons. However, this season they had their best performance in many years, advancing all the way to the regional finals.

Before their playoff run, they bolted through district with an awesome 9-1-0 record.

"I think this is the first time in school history boys soccer has achieved something like this," coach Wesley Kidd said.

Primed and ready to go to state, the boys took on Bryan in their first playoff game. Victory in their first game was followed by three more before the team advanced to their regional tournament. The games were played on astro turf, which the boys had not played on all year.

"I think we have a good chance of getting out of the tournament," senior Dennis Johnson said.

The boys were successful against their first opponent on the turf defeating Plano East. A win in the next game would qualify them for state with the game being held in Georgetown. Unfortunately, the tide turned and the Eagles were defeated by Plano.

"I had a great time playing with all my boys. It's going to be hard to find another team with that much heart and determination," senior Josh Wilson said. by Rhonda Ooten

Rough and Ready

Girls survive tough season

In a season plagued by injuries and player ineligibility, the Lady Eagle varsity soccer team perserved to make the U.I.L. play-offs for the sixth consecutive year.

"Throughout our season there were many obstacles, but we still made it to play-offs. We were very proud of ourselves," sophomore Lindsey Campbell.

Senior sweeper Amy Simpson and junior Sarah Fagan led a strong defense that kept the Lady Eagles in contention during most games.

"We battled through a real tough district, together we worked to make it to the play-offs," junior Sarah Fagan.

Seniors' Alicia Henry and Becky Thomas were offensive leaders, racking up an impressive showing in district play.

January saw the varsity team pitted against some top talent from around the state in the Woodlands Tournament. After the dust settled, the Lady Eagles brought home a 2-2 record from the tournament play.

"I credit our success to the strong leadership exhibited by the seniors throughout the year," coach Butch Spruill.

The varsity went on to finish their season third in a tough district race. Two teams went on to compete in the Regional II Tournament.

The snapping of towels could be heard all through the locker room after a glorious day at the District swim meet.

The swim team met daily to fine-tune their already hard-to-beat tactics with routines and strenuous exercise.

"With only two hours of practice everyday, we had to utilize the valuable time to coach many newcomers and the returning swimmers," Coach Bob Seagraves said.

With help from the community, the team was able to hold their meets and practices at the Williams Drive and Southwestern University pools.

Also, throughout the year, the swim team held special "meets" or "shaving parties." At these parties, members gathered at a designated house to cover each other with shaving cream and become almost hairless.

"I enjoyed the parties," junior Jeremy Burks said. "We had one before nearly every major swimming contest."

As always, hard work and dedication payed off at the district swim meet. The Lady Eagles placed second while the Eagles placed third. This was the best district placing ever by the Eagle swimmers.

"It was rewarding to place so well in district," sophomore David Houck said. "I hope this preps us up for a better showing next year." by Greg Myrick and Jesus Gonzalez

Golf Really Swings

Under the leadership of new head coach Keith Kosh, the varsity boys and girls golf teams had a great district showing.

Enduring long after school practices at both the Georgetown and Berry Creek Country Clubs, the golf team strived to achieve a district championship.

Early in January, at the Georgetown High School Invitational, the boys varsity took first place. Later, in Bastrop at the Dodson- Evans Memorial Classic the team came home with third.

The girls varsity finished their season with a third overall. Although the girls posted a winning season, they did not finish high enough to go past district play.

"This year was a good year, but next year we should go to Regionals," sophomore Amanda Stephens said.

However, sophomore Brooke Tull completed her season by finishing third, which enabled her to proceed to Regionals.

Junior Christy Martin was named all-district along with Tull.

Track Races to State

Eagle track had much to be proud of in the '97 season. With a strong district showing and outstanding individual efforts by both the girls and the guys, Georgetown was definitely a force with which to contend.

The Lady Eagles were led into an awesome season under the leadership of senior captain, Jennifer Whatley. Whatley set stadium records at both the Belton Big Red Relays and the Round Rock Bluebonnet Relays.

Other of Whatley's achievements include the district championship and third place in regional for the 1600M run, and second place in district for the 800M run.

Georgetown was home to the class 5-A, 3200M state champion. After a successful season that culminated in the district championship, junior Rebekah Lawless went on to place second at regionals and then take home the state medal.

Not to be left far behind her sister, junior Linsey Lawless placed second in the 3200M run.

The boys had an impressive showing with junior Jonathan Fawcett advancing all the way to state. Fawcett picked up a third place medal overall for his efforts.

Eagles Baseball Scores Hit Season

Ranked fifth in a district of six, Eagle varsity baseball was determined to prove the rating wrong. Defeating McNeil soundly with a score of 8-1 in the district opener, the Eagles were off to a great start.

Suffering their first defeat from Round Rock with a score of 4-3, Georgetown made adjustments and went on to win on the road against Leander and an emotional game against Westwood.

Following a season wrought with ups and downs, the Eagles finished with second place.

Defeating Killeen for the Bi-district championship, varsity baseball advanced to regional quarter-final play--a first in Georgetown baseball.

Under the lights of the Leroy

Dreyer Field at Blinn College, Georgetown defeated the Woodlands 4-3. In the second game of a best of three series, the Eagles came from behind to defeat the Woodlands team with a game tying and go-ahead single by senior centerfielder Lee Lundin.

"I was thinking first pitch-fastball," Lundin said, "I wanted a homerun, but a single will do."

Hopes for a state title were dashed by a history repeating loss to Klein Oak, their playoff nemesis from '96.

This season was the first in a new ball field that was named in a dedication ceremony that included Central Texas baseball celebrities, Tom Gustafson and major leaguer Spike Owen. by Heidi Mersiovsky

Long Way Home

Tough Year For Softball

The scorching sun beat down on the backs of the softball team as they prepared for a challenging season. Intense practices, cross country bike rides, and endurance boosting swim work-outs gave early indications that the team would rise to face the challenge of a tough district.

"Off season was a different cross training experience that brought us closer as a team," junior Courtney Turner said.

With early successes in tournament play, picking up wins at the Georgetown and Temple tournaments, the Lady Eagles felt confident going into district play with head coach Sue Davidson at the helm. However, injuries, ineligibilities, and rain-outs plagued the team early, leaving the Eagles stunned with a 2-8 record.

Wins on the road at McNeil and Leander proved that the team could come out victorious when determination and teamwork worked for them.

"We faced a great amount of adversity this season, but when we stayed focused on our goal, we were able to achieve it," senior Erin Negrón said.

With all but two starters returning next season, goals are set high to receive a playoff berth.

"Next year we will have seven returning starters, and we're looking forward to a whole new ball game," said Coach Davidson. by Becky Ochs

Success lies
Not in how well known you are,
But how well-repected...
Not in your power to take,
But your willingness to give.
It is measured
By the height of your aspirations,
The breadth of your vision,
The depth of your convictions.
Do not look
To the changing opinions of others
For news of your success.
Word comes in the small voice
You hear within at the end of the day,
Knowing you have done your best.
This is the only success that matters.

The person you have become was apparent even in the small child you once were. We are so proud of the many paths you have chosen and the others you have withstood. Your journey to this point has really been quite an adventure...the Olympics, Cabo, World Cup, "stray animals", Notre Dame, dancing at Disney World, acting, dancing, recitals, twirling, competitions, Miss Georgetown, and "Ode to Jackaroo" to just name a few. We have enjoyed that journey with you for your love of life and compassion had always been evident. As you embark on the next chapter of your life, pace yourself, stay focused and most of all, remember the support of your family.

As We Look Back

From my little Sweet Pea sitting on Daddy's knee,
To a beautiful young lady and a proud Wannabe.
When you were younger you mastered giving Robbie the Look,
Now that special brother-sister bond is there - a little time is all it took
That unique bond has always been there between you and your mother,
You can talk & laugh & be silly together, more than with any other.
We are proud of all your choices and the Group of
of friends you chose,
They helped prove that the more fun you have the faster time goes.
you have always been special to us, right from the start,
Even before the Champs voted for you,
you were our special Sweetheart.
We Love You!!! Mom, Dad, and Robbie

Brooke,

From the very beginning you were distinctive, definitely an answer to our prayers. Therefore, we have never ceased to be grateful for such a blessing as you: a sparkling, radiant light in our lives. Thank you for the valuable lessons you have taught us through your countless examples of faithfulness, especially in your many friendships from Duncanville to Georgetown. Thank you, also, for making our job as Christian parents uncomplicated and joyful. You are such an exceptional young lady. We love you so much! As you continue 'the race', this is our prayer for you:

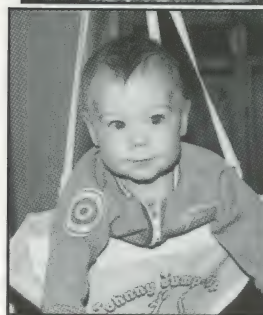

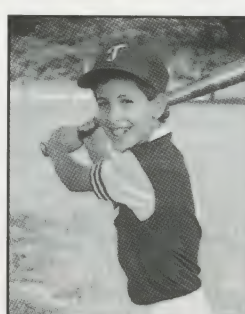

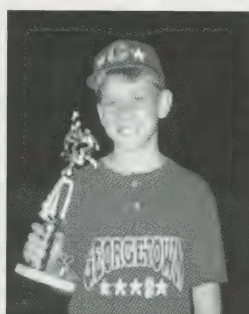

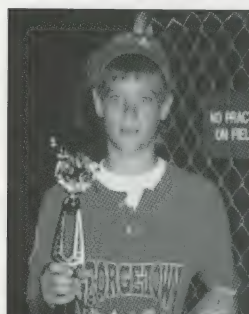

Continue to fix your eyes on Jesus and in everything consider Him who endured, so that you will not grow weary and lose heart.

"Be strong and courageous. Do not be terrified; do not be discouraged, for the Lord your God will be with you wherever you go." Josh. 1:9

When young wild eagles come of age, they are pushed from their cliff-side nests into empty air. They fall. Tumbling toward the ground, they must quickly combine instinct with everything they've learned so far. It's scary at first, but, like you, they'll struggle, adapt, and eventually soar. We know you've got it in you. Because you are the young eagle, and now's your chance to fly.

Taylor Publishing Company published the 52nd volume of the Aerie yearbook for Georgetown High School. Yearbook photographers and photojournalism students took and produced the majority of the photographs in the book. The class pictures were taken by George Gideon Photography. Taylor Jones of the Williamson County Sun and parents of students submitted the balance of the pictures. Staff members designed all the layout and developed the theme. Fonts used included New Century Schoolbook, Choco and Playhouse.

The pages were produced using PageMaker 6.5 on Macintosh computers. Some of the photographs were scanned using Photoshop 4.0 and an Apple One scanner. We would especially like to thank Jim Anderson for his patience and technical assistance. We would like to thank Superintendent Jim Gunn, Principal Mike Cargill and the School Board for their continued support and encouragement.

CROWN ME ROYAL! - Senior Erin Vargo and Lelan Deen, excited over hearing the news of their newfound royalness, accept their crowns gracefully SHOW YO' SPIRIT! - Juniors Rebecca Robins, Autumn Brown, Natalie Shimek and Nicole Sandileer express school spirit by painting and dressing for the pep-rally.

ROCK OF AGES!! Portrail of students from the 50's through the 90's for a photojournalism project.

We will not go quietly into the night...

The bustle of crowded halls; the deafening din of construction machinery, the groans over long cafeteria lines and new food services, the roar of fans at sporting events--these were memories that were a part of the '97-'98 school year.

Students were met at the opening of the school year by overcrowded halls and the noise of construction. Halls were filled with largest incoming class of freshmen in GHS history. The Ninth Grade Campus construction was underway none too soon.

Marriott Services was awarded the cafeteria contract. After the initial confusion and dismay over long lines subsided, lunch time settled into a workable routine. Spring semester saw the replacement of the rectangular tables with round, cafe style ones.

Athletics gave students and faculty something to cheer about. The awe-inspiring feats on the field and the court were enhanced by the addition of pep rallies held in honor of all sports.

Academics standards were raised to new heights. Students did well in UIL competitions and recognition was forthcoming in the form of praise, medals, plaques and awards.

Community involvement was evident at the campus. Students volunteered for many fine projects as blood drives, park renovations, feeding and clothing the needy, and literacy programs. Community leaders volunteered for service among the students in such projects as Prom Promise and Project Graduation.

Finally, after the last exam had been taken and the final senior walked at graduation---1998 was a year that did not fade away with a whimper. by Leah Ross

NOW THAT'S WHAT WE'RE TALKIN' ABOUT. Seniors Jason Millegan , Tim Crookam and Garrett Holt enjoy a proud moment in the game.

Erin,

The past few years
in band have been great.
What will the band
do next year without all of us awesome seniors? They'll probably just fall apart. I know you'll go very far in life, and I'm sure
I'll hear about your successes later in life. Good luck.

Erin,

I'm really glad I finally got to know you this year. You are a great person who will do nothing but super things in the future. It's too bad you were never in Govt class, we could have chatted more, but I guess you were busy (J/K). Seriously though, you're a great person & friend and best of luck in California, you'll love it.

- Matt
~~Thompson~~

Erin-
Good luck out in Cali at Stanford. Too bad
we never see you in Barber's class. But I'm glad I finally met you this year. You'll do great.
